the final week before Lent, and that the final week before Lent, and that south Seventeenth street, will entertain at a small informal bridge party at her it's true however, and it almost seems home tomorrow afternoon.

tonight will see the Second Assembly. It's true however, and it almost seems as if it would be a clear night as well as a fairly warm one, which you will grant is unusual.

I hope Mrs. Fisher will be able to receive. She is such a delightful person. She is Eleanor Hart's grandmother you know. Eleanor is all hedged round with Assemblyites. Her uncle. Dr. Charlie Hart, is on the committee and when he is not, her father, Mr. William Hart, generally is, or some other close relation, and her mother's mother. Mrs. Fisher, is the leading patroness this year. Mrs. Fisher was unable to receive on the night of the first Assembly because of illness, but she has entirely recovered since then. A good many people are in the South at present and there are not to be as many out-of-town guests for this ball, I understand, so the floor will be wonderful for dancing. I always like the second ball best. Everyone is afraid to stay away from the first for fear they won't see who got in and who was invited. At the second they know, and when they go they C. so for a good time.

Of course the whole of the ballroom floor at the Bellevue-Stratford will be children, of England, are visiting Mrs. Herbert Musgrave and her children, of England, are visiting Mrs.

when they go they C. so for a switched with the state of the ballroom floor at the Bellevue-Stratford will be used, the Clover Room being turned into a rustic garden, and the ballroom into a mass of Southern blooms. Supper will be served in the Palm and Stratford Rooms. In fact, that whole part of the Bellevue is screened off from the main hotel, the guests entering from Chankel Company of Twenty-first street and De Lancey place over the week-end.

Miss Elizabeth Briard Strong, of New Brunswick, will arrive tomorrow and will be the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Hartwell Strong, of Twenty-first street and De Lancey place over the week-end.

TIOW quickly the meetings of the around. There's another for tomorrow night in the Foyer. I was wishing the other evening at the Midwinter Ball that the Saturday evening could be next that the Saturday evening could be next with the Saturd

WHILE it is a bit late to tell a Washington Birthday story, this really happened yesterday. Hobbie came in from playing with a rather aggrieved expression of countenance. "Dad," said he, "what day was yesterday?" "Washington's Birthday," replied father, promptly, forgetting that one of Bobbie's friends was named that one of Bobbie's friends was named Washington; he are stated the "George."

that the Saturday evening could be next night. I remember in the dark ages when the Saturday evening met in old Horticultural Hall we sometimes benefited in the decorations from the balls of the night before.

Certainly the Academy was gorgeous on Tuesday night. You know they hung velvet curtains over the office decors in the corridors, and they car-town will give a luncheon in March in the staturday evening could be next might. Mr. Andrew C. Borzner, of 163 West Durham street, was given a surprise party last evening in honor of his birthday. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Skinner, Mri and Mrs. Frederick T. Leonard. Dr. and Mrs. Howard Bricker, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hurst.

they hung velvet curtains over the office doors in the corridors, and they carpeted the entrance hall and served the supper down there at small tables. And they had ferns and great vases of flowers out in the corridors, for while the ball is not large enough to take in the Academy floor proper, it has the whole house, you know. However, that is a thing of the past, but it's a beautiful memory.

Tomorrow night those receiving will be Mrs. Charlton Yarnall, Mrs. George McFadden, who recently came home from I'alm Beach; Mrs. D. Moreau Barringer, Mrs. Percy Clark. THE modern merchandiser overlooks opportunities to tell the world.

According to modern practice, one should design his delivery truck to represent his merchandise. Just as an occasional spark plug manufacturer now has his automobiles designed in the shape of spark plugs, so a pill manufacturer would undoubtedly design his autos to represent glorified liver pills.

The idea of making everything the modern merchandiser owns advertise his wares, especially when this idea is applied to automobile design, suggests enchanting possibilities.

Dentists in the future will not content themselves with driving down to work in the morning or to the opera in the evening in ordinary automobiles such as common people like you and I (well, possibly not you, but certainly I) affect. You will see him champing down the boulevard in au automobile designed to represent a hollow tooth, and of course he will be altting in the cavity.
