The auxiliary of Logan Post, 376, is holding parties to obtain funds for the work, and the members are taking up special collections at their meetings, which are held in the Logan Library, York and Wagner avenue.

Among the events planned by the auxiliary are a doughnut and pepper pot sale Tuesday at 4913 North Broad street a minstrel show and a tea at the home of Mrs. W. B. Bateman, 1122 North Broad street, March 22. The auxiliary is co-operating with the War Mothers.

Uncommon Sense

INDUSTRY is a necessary quality, but unaccompanied by intelligence it means only long years of fruitless labor. Scholarship is a fine thing to have, but many highly educated men spend their lives in poverty.

Courage is admirable, but the man who has nothing but courage is not likely to live very long.

SUCCESS comes to men who combine their qualities, as physicians combine the ingredients in a prescription.

All the virtues are necessary to that highest of all success which we call happiness. But none of them alone will bring happiness or even prosperity, which is the generally accepted notion of happiness.

Industry is as necessary to the genius as it is to the dullard—even more so, for the genius can employ it to a very good purpose.

Combination

Yet he must use it in combination with his intelligence, and he must accompany his intelligence with industry.

Many brilliant men waste their lives, and die in misery because they have been too lazy to develop the talent that was born with them.

Many men of high courage go about tilting at windmills, wearing chips on their shoulders and engaging in futile quarrels, when if they had employed their courage in combination with other

EVERY man probably has one quality that is dominant in his character—with some it is cleverness, with others dependability, with others moral, or physical courage.

But any of these qualities—alone—is worthless.

You will find that you need all of them, and in a very delicately balanced combination if you are to get out of the rut.

How to make that combination must be left to you. You know your own Qualities. Only by long and careful experimenting can you find in just what proportions they must be used.
