DESERTS TEAROOM TO LEARN TO FIGHT

Harry Kemp, Poet and Thinker, Takes Up Noble Art of Self-Defense

FIGURED IN ELOPEMENT

Harry Kemp, erstwhile member of several Little - Groups-of-Serious-Thinkers, poet, Socialist and stowaway, has shaken from his feet the dust of the Tea N' Tea, which as every one who thinks knows is the very greenest spot in Greenwich Village, and has allied himself for the time being with certain muscular but non-intellectual persons whom he has retained to teach him the noble art of self-defense.

In other words, he is going to learn to fight. Harry won ephemeral prominence some years ago by eloping with Upton Sinclair's wife from the Arden Colony, which was one of the little groups aforementioned. Their romance was one of those "We care-not-for-man-made-laws - it is righteous-in-the-sight-of-heaven" affairs.

The unfortunate opponent who will face the annihilation which Harry is preparing for him is none other than Samuel DeWitt, one of those gentlemen whose presence in the New York Legislature was rejected by that body. Some authorities hold that his private brand of bolshevism caused his political downfall; others maintain that he tried to read some of his poetry to the assembled statesmen.

The returns from this battle, which will be an honest-to-gosh contest with a referee and everything, have been concentrated by the combatants to a fund for establishing a prize for the most meritorious piece of verse during the year.

But Harry feels himself at a disadvantage in the affairs because he never has learned to swing the festive fist as Samuel has done, the latter having had a more prolific, not to say focused, flow of poetic inspiration.

Therefore, he trains daily at "Philadelphia" Jack O'Brien's place on Madison square, New York, returning only at night to the sweet solace of a dish of coloring among the Little Group of People Who Do Things.

FANCY POULTRY STOLEN

Eddystone Man's Hen Coop Looted of All but Two Fowls
 When jocund morn stood tiptoe on the Eastern mountain top Sunday morning, Joseph Molinski, of Eddystone, Pa., arose from his couch with ear attuned to catch the gladome cluck of his ninety-four prize specimens of fancy poultry in the back yard. There was nary cluck.

With fear in his heart Joseph ran down the back stairs and into his hen-coop only to find the place deserted except for one rooster and an equal number of hens. The other fowls had "flew the coop," or, to be more precise, had been snatched bodily therefrom.

His splendid aggregation of Spring-tous, Brahmins and Leghorns had died to make a Roman frieze. The solitary pair that remained sat perched with drooping feathers on their perch, a sorry reminder that they was yet hope for the future.

After the entertainment a dance was given.

 Domestic Says She Was Seized by Men From Auto
 Mary Norton, employed as a domestic in the family of William E. Thomson, 6824 Milton street, Mount Airy, notified the Chestnut Hill police that five men in an automobile tried to abduct her Sunday night about 9 o'clock. She said she screamed, and two of the men, who had jumped out of the machine and seized her, loosened their hold and ran back to the automobile, which sped away. The attempted abduction occurred at Gorgas lane near the Pennsylvania Railroad, the young woman told the police. She is twenty-three years old.

Here is the Opportunity for Which Many Men Wait Every Season
 Now ALL SIZES are Represented in the Sample Sale of Men's Banister Shoes and Oxfords
 Which Begins To-morrow Morning
$8.80
 Our Banister Sample Sales have been famous for years. Our only regret in presenting former Sample Sales was that only men who wore sample sizes—7 to 8, A to B—could participate. Now, however, by special arrangement with the James A. Banister Company, we have secured additional lines of Banister Oxfords (not High Shoes) in ALL SIZES and ALL WIDTHS—same grades as the samples, to sell at the same low price.
 These are the new spring styles produced by the James A. Banister Company for dress and for sports wear. They are in such leathers as tan calf, Scotch grain, cordovan, kidskin and white buckskin. The most attractive selection we have had in many years. There are both High Shoes and Low Shoes in the "sample" group (sizes 7, 7½ and 8 B, and 8 A), and the Oxfords are in a complete range of sizes and widths.
 For Footwear that would retail for one-half more to almost double. ALL SIZES
