Nancy Wynne Tells of Pretty Clothes—She Hears the Walton Clarks Will Live in the West for Some Years—Actors' Afternoon Next Week

I SAW Margaret Wright the other day wearing an awfully good-looking frock. It was of dark blue Poiret (tail) and the skirt had a band of wool embroidery about five inches wide above the hem. The wool was in tan and black red. The bodice or upper part of the gown was open at the neck, and she wore a long string of pearls.

Her hat was a rather small one of purple straw trimmed across the front with a purple wing, and she had a top coat of very dark blue material heavily braided, considerably in contrast with the black Persian lamb. She wore an silk stockings and fancy patent leather slippers with the open-work part at the heel and the upper part of the slipper set in a diamond shape from spending a day in Atlantic City.

I WAS sorry the other day to hear that the Walton Clarks, Jr.'s, are going to leave Philadelphia for a while anyway, if not permanently. Walton is going West on business, and expects to settle in Texas, perhaps in Dallas. And Betty is going with her two babies to stay with her mother, Mrs. Hutchinson Scott, in New York until Walton finds a house out there.

It would be interesting if they do. Won't it be interesting if they do? Betty is going to Dallas, where her uncle, Mr. Dallas, her brother is Dallas Scott, Mr. Clark's business is in that city, and they probably will be in the West for several years at any rate. We'll miss them ever so much, for Betty is attractive and the life of every party she goes to. Betty has beautiful eyes. They are gray blue and very large, with long black lashes, and they fairly dance with fun. Small Betty, who is now nearly four years old, has the same beautiful eyes, and it's not hard to guess what a belle she will be when her time comes to be introduced.

YOU know the last Cushman Club Actors' Afternoon will be held next Tuesday in the Academy of Music, because Kathleen Howard, the Metropolitan Opera singer who does such wonderful character work, (and will be there and they probably will be in the West for several years at any rate. We'll miss them ever so much, for Betty is attractive and the life of every party she goes to. Betty has beautiful eyes. They are gray blue and very large, with long black lashes, and they fairly dance with fun. Small Betty, who is now nearly four years old, has the same beautiful eyes, and it's not hard to guess what a belle she will be when her time comes to be introduced.

THE other evening Nancy had occasion to go into town on the train and was having a beautiful time watching the pretty girls and their overcoated friends boarding the train to go to a dance or the theatre. At one of the side seats she sat together, and they were lovely in their fluffy cloaks and beautifully arranged hair.

It appeared Sarah's car was out of commission and so their fathers and mothers decided they might ride in town together. Sarah joining them at the next station, and take a cab to their destination. As we neared the station they began peering out of the windows, looking for Sarah, and when she came in through the doorway I was not surprised that they seemed glad to see her. She looked so sweet with her velvet cloak and big fur collar. But what on earth was the long white arrangement hanging down at the back of the shoulder?

Suddenly there were shrieks of laughter from the three as, turning Sarah around, the other two discovered a long white shirt-waist hanging down over her back. She'd picked up the waist with the coat, and how it remained hanging from the collar until she reached the train. I cannot see, for it was attached by the extreme end of one sleeve. And it was a lovely one, too. Fortunately, they saved it, but the giggles kept up all the way in town.
