

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of the Fad for Carrying Canes and Hears How a Stable Is to Be Made Into a Cozy Home

I NEVER heard a more appreciative audience than that at the New Century Club last evening, when Katharine Morris and her co-workers in the Philadelphia Opera Company gave an evening of acts from various well-known operas and the appreciation was well deserved.

It was exceedingly good, some of the acts being quite beyond the ordinary and the dancing and acting was very noteworthy. You know those young people have no director, they just go to work and practice and do it all themselves and I think they deserve the greatest amount of credit.

You could not blame the audience, however, for rocking with joy, when the high priest in Samson and Delilah came on dressed up in a number of costumes, wearing his wrist watch. Either Delilah gave him a hint or he realized it himself, for as the performance went on the watch disappeared, and I don't think it was any sleight of hand trick on the part of the wren. She, by the way, has a most gorgeous and beautiful singing voice from "Samson."

The scene from Tosca was extraordinarily well done. Katharine Morris acts remarkably well besides dancing and singing, and Max de Schanassa really won the great applause of the evening with his very good singing and excellent acting. He has not a great voice, but he has a very good tone, and he sings with ease and expression and shows that he understands and knows the value of the work.

I must say I was more intrigued with the appearance of Samson and the high priest than any one else, because I was trying to see what they looked like. You see, they had so much hair on their heads and faces, almost as if you could see an occasional nose, and when Samson put his head down on Delilah's knee, I wondered how he breathed because she certainly gave him a good shove.

Among those I saw in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Morris, Mrs. Edward Mellor, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bertram Lippincott, Mrs. Barton Hize, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Lippincott, Dr. and Mrs. Morris Lewis, Miss Frances Wister and Marina and Fanny with her. Mr. and Mrs. John Claghorne, Mr. and Mrs. Agnew Adams, George Costello and Marie H. Carpenter, Grace and Elizabeth Brewster, Nicholas Douly and a number of other music lovers.

HAVE you noticed the latest wrinkle? All the girls are carrying canes when they go for walks on Sunday afternoons. I met about fifteen different ones on Sunday not all together, but in various parts of the country. Of course, women have carried canes for years, but the custom is becoming more general. You must wear a sports suit of some tweed in plain color or plaid, or a sports dress and cape of the same kind of material and hat to match. Wool stockings and flat-heeled rubber-soled oxfords and carry a cane, and then you are decidedly "it," so far as style goes. And to some extent, it is a very becoming get-up.

Take Marian Tomlin, for instance. She is tall and slender and has black hair and a bright color. I saw her yesterday in a stunning sports costume consisting of a skirt and cape of gray plaid and a hat made of the same material. She looked perfectly stunning.

SPEAKING of Marian reminds me of the Savoy Company, though she is not going to be in it this year. However, she reminds me of it because she has taken part in it for a number of years. Well, anyway, the Savoy has started to relate to the city and they held in the guild house of the Swedenborgian Church at Twenty-second and Chestnut streets on Tuesday night. This year the opera is to be "The Merry Widow," which will be sung last night at Katherine Morris' concert. It is to have the leading part, and Deborah Seal will have a part, as will Fanny Wister and Sarah Buller, who have bought the Duni's stable on Prospect avenue between Evergreen and Summit, which is at present only fitted out with stalls. It is a very pretty stable, though and given time they can doubtless turn it into a most attractive small house. It would not surprise me if it became one of the most attractive small houses about the city.

I HAVE been wondering what the Robert Bollings would do about a house in Chestnut Hill. You know they rented the Duhings' house and now Miss Duhing wants it back this year, and there was actually no place on there they could get. Finally they decided to live in a tent, but could not rent ground for that experiment, and so now they hear they have bought the Duni's stable on Prospect avenue between Evergreen and Summit, which is at present only fitted out with stalls. It is a very pretty stable, though and given time they can doubtless turn it into a most attractive small house. It would not surprise me if it became one of the most attractive small houses about the city.

AS I have often said, it all depends on the point of view. A certain young debutante whom you know and I know decided that she would not spend all her time just trifling with winter, but would take up some work in a girls' club in one of the settlement houses. Incidentally this debutante has been a great belle and has no less than five quite "heavy" suitors and some ten or more very "interested" beaux. The other day after teaching some of the girls at the settlement house, one of them who has taken a liking to her, slipped up and a confiding "how are you, Miss T. are you keeping steady?" Miss T. was trying not to seem surprised, managed to gasp out, "And said the girl with a sigh, "Gee, you don't know how free you are."
