

WOMEN'S CHARGES
Mabel Says "Honest John's"
Letter Was Brought On by Unfavorable Temper

HIS SISTER AIDS WIFE

His father is in his grave now and God bless his soul, but he must be judged for the injustice he has done to me and my daughter, Hazel.

Hazel, my only fair-haired girl, returned to the letter written by her father to his sister in Chicago in which she accused his wife of plotting his death and his daughter of doing the same.

Hazel today said that her mother and aunt are ill in bed under the care of Dr. Maul, of Riverside.

"Mother and aunt Elizabeth are all broken up and are unable to see any strangers or submit to questioning."

"My father had a perfectly terrible temper, and mother and I sometimes wonder whether his mental balance was entirely perfect after some of the outbursts."

"At times he was loving and generous, but he had frequent spells of depression, and he was all wrapped up in the show business and any worries that came up in connection with his circus always made him unable to break into a violent outburst at the slightest provocation."

"Without any question father wrote that letter in a fit of suspicion and anger. It could have been because it stands to reason there was no other motive."

"When father came from Williams-town, the day before he was killed, after a visit to the show's winter headquarters, he was in the best of humor."

"I put my arms around him as I always did when he came home that way, and he called me 'Honey,' a pet name he has always had for me. His face was dirty from fast driving, and when he came down he said to mother: 'I'm not such a bad looking old guy, at least not when I get all shaved and slicked up.'"

"Last She Heard Him Speak
That is the last thing I ever heard him say because I went out then to a picture show, and when I got home he had been murdered."

"In the letter she said mother had taken his gun and hid it. That isn't true at all. Mother didn't have his gun and never hid it."

"Mrs. Jeschke is a delicate woman, and heeded his advice and that I lied to him. That is as untrue as it can be. He never would have written that way if he had been in one of his fits of suspicion. I always minded my own business, and tried to do as little as possible to cross him. I knew sometimes he was suspicious of me, because occasionally when he came on a trip he would pull away from me and say, 'Honey, you're kidding me, you don't really love me. You don't pay attention to it though, because I know how my father was at times.'"

"Harry Mohr, of Riverside, brother of John Brunen, directed today that the letter proves nothing against the wife. It will all be answered fully and conclusively in time."

"Mrs. Jeschke is a delicate woman, and heeded his advice and that I lied to him. That is as untrue as it can be. He never would have written that way if he had been in one of his fits of suspicion. I always minded my own business, and tried to do as little as possible to cross him. I knew sometimes he was suspicious of me, because occasionally when he came on a trip he would pull away from me and say, 'Honey, you're kidding me, you don't really love me. You don't pay attention to it though, because I know how my father was at times.'"

"The high lights of the first letter registered letters sent in reply, which Parker took, soaked with the murdered man's blood, from 'Honest John's' sister, the daughter of both Mrs. Brunen and of Hazel was innocent, the attorney said."

"He also declared that the reports of a woman's wealth are exaggerated, that she had only $18,000 in cash and a half interest in the show, and his insurance amounted only to a $2000 policy. The letter, the lawyer declared, evidently was written in the heat of anger, and is absolutely without foundation in truth."

"The accusation was hinted at in two registered letters sent in reply, which Parker took, soaked with the murdered man's blood, from 'Honest John's' sister, the daughter of both Mrs. Brunen and of Hazel was innocent, the attorney said."

"IN CASE ANYTHING HAPPENS"
In case anything happens to me sister I want you to come and take full charge of everything, for I think Doty is figuring to do some thing with me, and think she can get away, for she talks about it all the time, she never give a damn for the family, and besides she fears I leave everything to you, she wants to get money, for all she cares for is a good time, she shot at me at Christmas Day and she would have killed me but I daged and got my gun and fired and I hit her in the Stomach, but her career saved her, only fired once, she stole the gun out of her brothers trunk. Her brother is a good fellow and knows I am right, and he gave her plenty calls, she shot six times and I only once.

ter I asked if anyone had seen it and he told me no, so far as he knew. Why would I have gone to all this trouble if I had agreed to the publication of the letter?

"I called up District Attorney Roman today but he said he could not give his own opinion because it was a private matter. He admitted, however, that when he saw the letter in the papers this morning he knew it would injure our case greatly."

"The text of Brunen's letter to his sister follows:
"Riverside, N. J., Feb. 20th, 1922.
"My Dear Sister & Family:
"Just a few lines to let you know I am thinking of you. I hope you are all well."

"Well, dear Sister I have sold my Home and it looks as if I will sell the Show if I get a chance. I almost gave it up because I have no home to go to. I always tried to be a good father and I got all my children out of me. I found them all out, but I have never seen any of them since they were born. I care what your Daughters do, they run around with men and they have ruined Hazel, why that girl does not pay any attention to her father, she is a disgrace to the time and know that Doty will care to do so, for I found them out and now I am watching, when I trusted you, you thought everything was going on right and I was happy, but when Doty goes with men and lets Hazel marry a tramp, from that time on I am not your father any more."

"Why they teach Hazel nothing but a lot of the last life of this world, all her desire is a good time, it simply kills her, for I have struggled so hard that they should have plenty of money to give up a home because a lot of had people butting in, when the time comes they will be glad to give up their home and their family, they are surrounded by nothing but scoundrels, they do not fear man or God, only looking for pleasure and evil. Doty's Sister I had but one child, she is the worst in the bunch, Doty was alright until she came with her family, she simply have poisoned her mind, so Hazel will never be contented, I was always good to Doty's people, for I felt so sorry for them, they had me believe their father was a good man, but when they drove him away from home after he failed in business, and now they claim he is dead, but I know he is not, they want to be insane."

"In case anything happens to me sister I want you to come and take full charge of everything, for I think Doty is figuring to do some thing with me, and think she can get away, for she talks about it all the time, she never give a damn for the family, and besides she fears I leave everything to you, she wants to get money, for all she cares for is a good time, she shot at me at Christmas Day and she would have killed me but I daged and got my gun and fired and I hit her in the Stomach, but her career saved her, only fired once, she stole the gun out of her brothers trunk. Her brother is a good fellow and knows I am right, and he gave her plenty calls, she shot six times and I only once."

"I am not afraid to die, but I will not let them drive me away, they cannot do so, they have to go to the store and find out it was not so I do not care for the money end of it, it hurts me greatly how she teaches Hazel to lie and go wrong, she simply is ruining children, the worst crime on earth."

"I wish you write her a letter and tell her what it means to her little ones, your Hazels Godmother and maybe she listens."

"No Sister should anything happen to me, just get an Attorney and send him this letter."

"Hoping your in good health and dont worry over this, give my best to Bill and the boys, wish Billy was big enough to be around me, for I am disgusted to work, for a man needs someone to work for and I cannot do it myself, for the one purpose to my family, done my best and accomplished my aim, only to be disappointed by the ones you think are dear to you."

BRUNEN'S LETTER TO HIS SISTER
Above is a reproduction of part of the letter "Honest John" Brunen wrote to his sister, weeks before his murder. In it he refers to his fear of "Doty," his name for Doris, his wife particular line of work has taught me that it pays to keep under cover my investigation."

"Mrs. Mohr Exonerated
Detective Parker entirely exonerated Mrs. Harry Mohr, Mrs. Brunen's sister. "The night of the murder," explained the detective, "she said to me: 'I don't care who you get the murderer, but I don't care who it is. Get them, I've lost the best friend I have ever had.'"

"Of the possible connection of George Werner, the discharged show cook with the case, Detective Parker said: "When I asked Mrs. Brunen if she had any idea who might have killed her husband she thought awhile and said: 'He had some trouble with a man named Dabob Werner, who had the cook car connection with the show. He discharged Werner, and Werner threatened to get even. I know that Werner owned a shotgun.'"

"The giving out of Brunen's letter," said Parker, "has undone the work of the police department for some time. It has given the general public a false impression as to the present time of making any arrest. I am frank enough to say that I don't believe I have sufficient evidence to warrant such action."

"This letter was extremely vital to our case. It was not the whole works, however, and we have plenty of other data and information that may round out our case for us. The contents of that letter I know the night of the murder. I got my information from two blood-stained letters I took out of the dead man's pocket."

"These letters, registered, were from his sister in Illinois. I will go further than that. The letter doesn't reveal one-fifth of an actual knowledge of this case. I told me this, that a week before he was slain he was in fear of his life—that he was constantly on the lookout for a shot. He had been in the room. He said: 'If I am shot, I want it to be seen from the outside.'"

Joyce as secretary. Again unanimous approval was given and the secretary read the letter for the meeting.

Mr. Gordon announced that the company's annual report would be read unless the stockholders voted otherwise. Dr. O'Brien said that as copies had been sent to all stockholders that also should be passed over.

Dr. O'Brien next moved for approval of the acts of the Board of Directors for the preceding year. This was given unanimously.

There was a perceptible tension when the next step on the routine was reached. The chairman called for the names of the candidates for the eight directorships.

It was the critical moment of the meeting, and many present looked for the insurgent directors to show their strength. The five insurgents had abandoned the fight last night.

Ellis Ames Ballard, general counsel for the company, who sat near the platform, announced that he had been selected from the stockholders because they would co-operate with and follow the leadership of Mr. Mitten, who thereby would control the board's co-operation as well as of that of the men and the management.

Mr. Ballard paused for a few moments while stockholders waited in suspense for the names of the candidates to be named. No other candidates were forthcoming. Mr. Ballard moved for the closing of the nominations. This was approved, assuring the election of Mitten.

James T. Fernley, John H. Schwarz and Harrison S. Gill had been chosen as tellers for the election. They sat at a table near the platform. Balloting proceeded rapidly.

When all the votes had been tabulated Mr. Fernley announced the result. A storm of applause and cheers rolled back from the stockholders when the votes were called for the Mitten management and that no votes had been cast against the Mitten ticket.

After the vote had been announced, former directors, who had been named by the P. R. T. by the largest vote ever passed by the stockholders, I voted to resign from their election. Mr. Mitten then spoke.

"I wish," said, "to voice my appreciation of what the stockholders have done, thus making what while the eleven years of effort made. They are to recognize that this starts us today with a new responsibility, and that every man shares with me in making good everything we said and then some."

"The year 1921 was a year for picking up the pieces of a property in an unconditioned following the war period, and this has been done," pursued Mr. Mitten.

"Now, it doesn't rest with one-man management, but one man leadership, and 10,000 determined men and women who are responsible, who can and will do. Never will you regret your vote today."

Mr. Gordon then said: "I congratulate you on the bright page that you have written today."

Mr. Ballard moved that a vote of thanks be extended to the chairman, the secretary and the tellers. This was done unanimously and on the motion of Mr. Gordon, the meeting was adjourned at 12:20 o'clock.

Experts on P. R. T. Board
After the election of directors the P. R. T. board of directors met this morning to discuss the situation.

"President Mitten, with four immediate associates, representing the highest developed skill in their particular line, as directors will also serve as the executive committee, reporting monthly to the Board of Directors."

"W. C. Dunbar, who is also vice president in charge of finance and accounting, is appointed in the place of the late Mr. Richardson, who is also vice president in charge of operations, of wide experience, represents the pick of the land in opening new territory in Pennsylvania."

rison including the site of the reservoir, and the proposed stadium to the west line of Thirty-third street, and including such additional area as the development of the exhibition may require."

Other Sites Mentioned
The report also mentioned that the South Philadelphia site may be utilized for the staging of a naval and maritime display in the vicinity of League Island, while the Roosevelt Boulevard site could be properly converted into an adjunct of the main fair by having the agricultural and livestock exhibit there.

Great stress, however, is laid upon the fact that the Parkway site is far and away the best available of many good ones. The committee predicts that the accessibility of the grounds will bring about a high-water mark in the attendance of fairs.

The daily attendance is estimated at from 100,000 upward with a total for the fair of 40,000,000 persons, an unprecedented number.

It is suggested that the fair open on May 1, 1920, and continue until November 15 or December 1.

A resolution accompanying the report, unanimously adopted, provides for the condemnation of ground by Council and the placing of the entire exposition tract under the supervision of the Board of Commissioners, to be transferred later to the control of the Sesqui-Centennial Association.

Far from destroying the beauty of the Park, the committee says, the fair will improve matters by the removal of unsightly buildings and conditions on the west bank of the Schuylkill. The fair site is a valuable asset to the city, and it will be accessible by trolley from all sections of the city, while other sites would entail the use of automobiles or railroads, with a corresponding cost to the poor man.

At the outset the report states that the committee had given careful and impartial consideration to all sites. The peculiar adaptability of Philadelphia for the holding of the world fair is mentioned, it being pointed out that 85,000,000 persons live within 400 miles of Philadelphia, all of whom are potential visitors to the fair.

The historical landmarks that will attract the attention of visitors to Philadelphia are mentioned, with the fact that Philadelphia is the logical place for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The committee points out that the average territory embraced by the fairs of the past is 375 acres and that the fair grounds at the Parkway site are 1,000 acres, with the further advantage of affording incalculable capacity for expansion.

Accessibility is a point that is stressed, the report pointing out that the site will be easily available from every point of the compass. Visitors could be admitted and discharged from the fair grounds at many points. In addition, it is readily accessible to the three railroads leading into Philadelphia and is within a comparatively short distance of the river and the city.

The report also emphasizes the fact that all the great highways of the city readily lead to the site and afford convenient approaches to automobile traffic.

The attendance at the Park site, it is declared, would far exceed that at any of the other sites, because the attendance largely comprises the fair figures, and it is estimated that ten times as many persons would attend the fair held in the Park as would journey to the fair grounds if they were on one of the outlying sites.

The value of concessions, too, it is stated, would be far greater in a central site, and the money derived from that source alone would probably be greater than that received in paid admissions.

A subsidence in the shape of the abutments of the west bank of the river could be eliminated by the world fair and the blot of West Philadelphia thus removed, together with the smoke and stench arising from the stockyards.

"This improvement," to quote the report, "of the west bank of the river has been needed for decades and now is the time to do it."

Expenditure of $500,000
The land on the west bank of the Schuylkill from the Spring Garden Street Bridge to the city site, would cost the city $300,000, it is estimated, and the abutment would entail the expenditure of an additional $200,000.

On the east side of the river, the report says, the tracks of the Erie, more and Ohio Railroad could be covered by a beautiful roadway reared upon arches that would protect the approach to the beautiful city, and improve the highway, to that imposing edifice. The assessment for ground that will have to be taken upon the east side of the river is placed at $272,000 exclusive of the railroad arch roadway.

OTHER SITE BACKERS
RAP PARK SELECTION

Proponents of the Roxborough and South Philadelphia sites for the Sesqui-Centennial today declared the selection of the Fairmount Park and Parkway site by the committee a "mistake" and a "blunder."

"It is a mistake," said Joseph P. Gaffney, who is spokesman for the South Philadelphia delegation, "but we have not given up hope. Perhaps it will be like the selection of a site for the San Francisco Exposition. The committee first selected Golden Gate Park. Two months later they saw that they were taking a South Philadelphia people are taking to say nothing until people realize the destruction that will be done to the Park and bring about another decision."

"I have not given up the fight for the South Philadelphia site, nor will I give up until the people of Philadelphia give me the satisfaction to have Fairmount Park put up."

"It is a big blunder," said A. R. Haig, who has championed the claim of the Roxborough delegation. "Two months later they saw that they were taking a South Philadelphia people are taking to say nothing until people realize the destruction that will be done to the Park and bring about another decision."

Kern Dodge, who has urged the Roosevelt boulevard site, said the committee representing the northeast will continue to battle to have the fair on the boulevard.

SOUTH AFRICA NEARLY FREE OF FIGHTING INSURGENTS

Capture of Fordeburg Believed to Be Beginning of the End
London, March 15.—(By A. P.)—With all sectors of the disaffected area in South Africa cleared of rebels except certain portions of the Johannesburg, or central, region of the Rand, the struggle apparently has entered its final phase. Jeppentown, in the east end of Johannesburg, seems to be the principal stronghold of the rebels.

Artillery, tanks and airplanes were used in the capture of Fordeburg from the revolutionists. The latter disregarded notices dropped from airplanes advising them until 11 o'clock in the morning to surrender, but capitulated after seventy-five minutes of bombardment.

Another success was achieved in East Rand, where extensive proprietary mines were recovered and 158 revolutionists captured. Their leaders, however, escaped.

Johannesburg, March 15.—(By A. P.)—Advice from Fordeburg, timed late yesterday, report that Government infantry was then clearing the streets after the capture of the town, from the rebels. Many prisoners had been taken, and the remainder were retiring on the Langlaagte River.

Leaflets were dropped by airplanes warning the women and children to leave before the town was bombarded. There was an immediate response, a steady stream of refugees proceeding to a special camp nearby.

TESTIFIES AGAINST SISTER

Kin of Mrs. Amy Powell, Pianist, Aids Railroad in Damage Suit
New York, March 15.—(By A. P.)—Mrs. Cecil Florence Bendish, of Brooklyn, today testified in Supreme Court against her sister, Mrs. Alma Webster Powell, widely known pianist and opera singer, in the $75,000 damage suit which the latter instituted against the New York Central Railroad Company for injuries alleged to have been received in a wreck near Millerton, N. Y., in 1920.

The witness swore her sister had been suffering from rheumatism for twelve years and that this accounted for the crooked-finger on her right hand. Mrs. Powell yesterday alleged this crook was due to the wreck.

After she had expressed belief that her sister had been slightly irrational for some years, the defense asked Mrs. Bendish if she knew Mrs. Powell had played before notable world arias.

"Yes," she replied, "but my sister never could stretch a full octave."

GIBSON BRINGS BACK BRIDE

Polish Minister Wed Daughter of Belgian Court Official in Brussels
New York, March 15.—Hugh S. Gibson, United States Minister to Poland, and his bride, who was Miss Yneska Rejzewska, daughter of a Belgian court official, were married in Brussels today.

It was not until several years later that McElroy got a promotion. Then he was made a yardman at the Audubon street and Lehigh avenue yards, where he now is. Meanwhile he had become an officer of the Co-operative Association and this year was elected as its president.

"At the close of the meeting today A. A. Mitten, son of Thomas E. Mitten, shook hands with McElroy."

"This is the biggest thing in industrial relations that has happened yet," said Mr. Mitten.

"Yes, sir," replied McElroy, seeming to speak for the first time a prepared sentence. "It has done more to bring men and management together than anything else I know of."

Mad Jackal Terrorizes Viennese
Vienna, March 15.—(By A. P.)—A five-legged jackal ran wild through the streets in the heart of Vienna last night, terrorizing the population. The beast pursued a crowd of people, charging and biting and biting onto persons. It finally was killed. An examination revealed it had been suffering from rabies.
