Jersey City Blacksmith Believed to Have Been Woman's Mysterious Correspondent

George L. ("Dutch") Werner, "Honest John" Brunen's former circus cook, has been located, and Ellis Parker, Burlington County detective, has gone to interview him.

Before he left shortly before noon today Parker declared that after his interview with Werner there might be an important arrest in the Brunen murder mystery.

Parker says that Werner is not under arrest and will not be arrested. The Burlington County detective, however, believes that the former cook can give important information on the slaying of Brunen in his home at Riverdale, N. J., a week ago today.

Detective Parker left in his automobile to visit Werner, taking with him the Trooper Eading and Miss Anna Yoo, Parker's confidential stenographer, who has the reputation of having taken down more murder confessions than any woman in the State.

The detective refused to say where he was going, but estimated it would take him "a couple of hours" to get there.

Before he left Parker had another interview with Joseph R. ("Doc") Ward, blacksmith and former "billyhood" of the Brunen circus, who was brought from Jersey City by Holly late last night. Afterward Ward was turned over for further examination to Prosecutor Kelsey.

Ward admitted in the course of a long examination by Detective Parker and Captain Joseph F. Larkins, who came with him from Jersey City, that he was the mysterious correspondent of Brunen at the Palmyra Post-office, addressed to "Mrs. D. Nolen."

Ward was questioned for four hours at the Mount Holly jail.

Mrs. Helen Alexander, South Juniper Street, Became Dependent

VERSES FOUND SHOW SHE BELIEVED LIFE TOO HARD

Wanted to Pen Real Literature, but Better Publications Refused Stories

Forsaken

Lonely, dispirited and weary of life, to judge by poems found among her effects, Mrs. Helen King-Alexander was found dead from gas in her home at 312 South Juniper street.

Mrs. Alexander was a noted publicist, public stenographer and magazine writer, and recently opened a boarding house at the Juniper street address. Financial matters had given her grave concern, according to the boarders, and recently she became melancholy. She is believed to have gone to her room about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and some time between then and midnight last night to have turned on the gas.

Anthony Smith, a roomer, detected the high odor, and found her lying in bed, dead.

Scattered about her room were scraps of paper, bearing poems grave and gay. It was declared to be sufficiently examined by the superintendent of the institution.

When Dodge appeared before Judge Jayne shortly before noon the corporation counsel who prosecuted the case against him asked more time to prepare an answer to the contentions upon which the writ was based. By agreement of counsel, the hearing went over until this afternoon. Dodge meanwhile being remanded to the custody of Sheriff Coak.

Dodge spent his first night of imprisonment in the county jail, having summoned a physician who declared he was suffering from a fever, induced by nervousness and excitement. He was declared to be sufficiently recovered this morning, however, to be assigned to a job among other prisoners. Three "jobs" were held out as possibilities: Washing dishes, working on the coal, or taking care of the prison furnace.

Scientist Here Laid Low Another 'McDonald Ghost'

Dr. T. L. Bolton Exposed Quackery of Nocturnal Visitor to Family of Same Name as in Antigonish and With a Mary Ellen

An episode, coincident in many remarkable respects to the recent happenings at Antigonish, Nova Scotia, which excited the wonder of half the world and which are now said to have been inspired by a "ghost" discredited in Mary Ellen McDonald's case, has been brought to light by Dr. Thaddeus L. Bolton, professor of psychology at Temple University.

The episode investigated by Dr. Bolton occurred near Missoula, Mont., in the spring of 1913, and so insistent in the parallel, even to names and temperamental characteristics of the principal actor, that Dr. Bolton decided to make it public.

At that time Dr. Bolton had the chair of psychology at the University of Montana, in Missoula, a little town in a valley of the Blackfoot Mountains, not far from the Canadian border.

The supposedly supernatural manifestations on that occasion Dr. Bolton found to be palpable fraud brought on by a desire for notoriety, and rather merely a gratification of megalomania or for some ulterior purpose he is not certain.

Interested by Senator Dixon

"The case," said Dr. Bolton, "was brought to my attention by Joseph M. Dixon, then but lately out of the United States Senate and now Governor of the State. It seemed that a Canadian family by the name of MacDonald, who had been living in a mountain gulch some eight or nine miles out of Missoula had been disturbed by a series of phenomena and wanted an investigation. I told him to send them to me, and he invited me to come on the following evening.

"MacDonald was then a youngish, good looking man of about thirty-five. He was shy and reticent and then during the rest of my acquaintance with him I got very little out of him. He said he, however, that he was a salesman of high-class liquors for a Canadian firm.

"He said in a matter-of-fact-though way that the phenomena at his house concerned spirit knockings during the night, ghostly visions and other strange things. I said I should like to visit the house, and he invited me to do so on the following evening.

"In the meantime I made inquiries concerning the family. I learned they had come to Missoula about a year previously and that they were very friendly and sociable, but that nobody knew much more than that of them.

"A storm was gathering as I made the journey out in the morning and during the frightful hours that were allowed me to see the house.

BELL WANTS JOB; WON'T BUY IT

Pittsburgh Banker Emphatically Denies Rumors of Financial Deal for Senate Seat

'WOULDN'T PAY PENNY NOR PERMIT FRIENDS TO DO SO'

Meanwhile Supporters of Major Reed Are Continuing Boom

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger, Pittsburgh, March 17.—John A. Bell, Pittsburgh millionaire, who, according to rumors instantly denied, was to be the beneficiary of a scheme by which Senator William E. Crow would resign in favor of Bell, provided Mr. Bell undertook Crow's financial liabilities, issued the following statement today: "I have been informed recently that Senator Crow's physicians have advised him to get through Congress, where a report that a monetary proposal is under consideration in connection with the question of my candidacy.

"I would not consider assuming any monetary obligation to secure the nomination or support. I would not pay so much as a penny, nor would I permit my friends to do so, for the nomination or the endorsement of any man, faction or party.

"No payment has been made or will be made by me or any of my friends. No promise has been made or will be made directly or by implication. The whole report of a monetary consideration is false, malicious and without foundation in fact."

Senator Crow, who is a patient in Mercy Hospital, where he has been for three months, still maintains that he decided, as a result of the reported "deal," not to resign, and instead will himself be the candidate for the Republican nomination in the May primaries.

Another report was that if Crow decides to do this, he will find Bell an opponent in the primaries.

Meanwhile talk increases of Major David A. Reed, of Pittsburgh, for the place. If Reed should be slated, the law office of Reed, Smith, Shaw & Beal, formerly Knox & Beal, would in a space of twenty years have included two members of the firm in the United States Senate, as one of the founders of the firm was the late Senator P. C. Knox.

Governor Spruill said in this city today that he would not be swayed from naming Bell as Senator because of the "lies of poison-spreaders" who are gossiping of the Senate seat on the auction block if Senator Crow resigns.

"That is one of the reasons why it is difficult to get high-class, self-respecting men to take an interest in public life," he said.

"Because a lot of malicious poison-spreaders, who have made it their business to get high-class men out of public life, are doing their best to get high-class men out of public life."

EVIDENCE AGAINST WILLIAM C. McCONNELL, FORMER PROHIBITION DIRECTOR FOR PENNSYLVANIA, WAS LAID BEFORE THE FEDERAL GRAND JURY TODAY UNDER THE PERSONAL DIRECTION OF UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY COLES. THE THIRD-FLOOR CORRIDOR IN THE FEDERAL BUILDING OUTSIDE THE GRAND JURY ROOM WAS CROWDED WITH WITNESSES, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE AGENTS MINGLED IN THE CROWD TO GUARD AGAINST POSSIBLE TAMPERING. FRANK J. WILSON, ACTING AGENT IN CHARGE OF THE SPECIAL INTELLIGENCE BUREAU OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE HERE, WAS THE FIRST CALLED BEFORE THE GRAND JURORS TODAY. HIS BUREAU IS CHARGED WITH UNEARTHING BIG BOOTLEGGING PLOTS. QUIZ McCONNELL'S SECRETARY Testimony also was given by Mrs. Edith Mawson, formerly secretary to McCONNELL; Miss B. K. Wiley, chief clerk of the permit division, and Miss Susie Middleton and Miss Margaret Walsh, clerks in the same division. THE young women were equipped with documents covering more than a hundred cases which came up when McCONNELL was the "dry" chief in this State. E. L. Breidlinger, president of the Dill Company, of Norristown, Harry T. Frank, of the E. C. W. Drug Company, 1730 Sansom street, testified concerning alleged withdrawals alleged to have been made for their companies August 3, 1921. Each said they were credited with withdrawing 7500 gallons, but that had not received a single drop of the liquor. Bank Employes Called Employes of several banks also have been subpoenaed. It was understood they had records showing how the bank accounts of McCONNELL's principal aides fattened on the liquor trade. T. Henry Walnut, who was ousted as special assistant United States Attorney, was not among those willing to be summoned, although he said today he was willing to relate the facts he gained during months of investigation. Mr. Walnut yesterday said he was recovering from office because he was subpoenaed into a state of terrified expectancy. Washington authorities to be asked to send Mr. Walnut to assist in their investigation. The Anti-Saloon League is closely watching every move in the case and desires to have Mr. Walnut called into the grand jury room to complete the evidence he has assembled by working day and night for months. As new light is thrown on the liquor ring case, it presents the aspect of a large conspiracy reaching into the more populous counties of the State. Politicians are apprehensive. They fear that the evidence is charged with dynamite powerful enough to tear to shreds many plans that have been carefully made in readiness for the May primaries. On McConnell Case Mr. Walnut also was going to press for the indictment of William C. McCONNELL, who resigned as State Senator, then his two chief aides in the prohibition office, Albert F. Slater and Hiram W. Bonner, were indicted through Mr. Walnut's efforts. A prohibition official was sent here with the title of associate prohibition director and for a time all McCONNELL did was to draw his salary as director. In the investigation directed by Mr. Walnut attention was given to Harvey J. Smith, said to have been interested

WALL ST.'S 'SHREWDEST WOMAN' HAS HIDDEN RICHES

$1,000,000 in Jewels and Securities Found—Total Estate $3,500,000

New York, March 17.—More evidence that Mrs. Sarah J. Wyckoff Bent, who died a few months ago in her home in the Bronx, well earned her title as the shrewdest woman in Wall street, was unearthed today.

Temporary administrators of her estate, going to one of several safe deposit boxes rented by her, discovered more than a million dollars worth of jewels and securities which no one knew about. This discovery, plus a statement from the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., which she had recently traded, that she had left an $82,000 cash deposit there, led the administrators to estimate her entire fortune at more than $3,500,000.

Of this sum her second husband, Thomas C. Bent, will receive $1,500,000, while other relatives will get the rest. Her will will be offered for probate next week.

The late J. P. Morgan was quoted as having termed her the cleverest woman on the market and this reputation led many of her younger friends to come to her for tips. During the panic of 1907, when steel dropped almost out of sight, Mrs. Bent bought heavily and made half a million dollars.
