Arrowroot is manufactured from the root stalk of the Marante (Arundinaces Lian) and is the smallest of all the starch granuals. The tree which produces this starch is native to Brazil and Oriental countries. Arrowroot is easiest of all starches to digest, and for this reason is used in invalid cooling and children's foods. The starch grains rupture and cook about 190 degrees Fahrenheit.

Tapioca and Cassava are the fleshy yoots of two species of the Manihot, prepared by special process of manufacture. The tapioca is prepared for the market in the granulated form and pearl.

Hominy is prepared from corn.

Durum wheat is an extremely hard winter wheat of a flinty character and is grown principally in western North Dakots. Montaris and Manitoba.

The laboratory lesson today is breadmaking.

The baker years ago found out that if he desired a standard uniform product from his ovens he then must standardize his methods. So he worked out a plan in which he could produce a loaf of bread each day in the week of uniform No. 2—About what per cent of this of bread each day in the week of uniform appearance, flavor and color. Now the housewife can do the same if she will but follow plain and simple instructions and discard methods of the hit-or-miss plan. Temperature is no longer considered a fad and intelligent persons today use the thermometer to gauge not only the temperature of the body, but also of the room, of the house, as well as the atmosphere outdoors.

For Practice Work

Wheat is a well-known grain, yielding a fine white flour, which is used extensively for baking brend, pastries, cakes, and also in the manufacturing of the Italian pastes.

The wheat, as milled into flour, is divided into four distinct varieties, known as hard winter wheat; hard spring wheat, soft winter wheat and Durum wheat flour. Each variety possesses widely different qualities for the making of bread.

The winter wheat flour, as grown in Mianesota, Dakota and Manitoba, as well as that grown in Kansas and Nebraska, is of the hard winter wheat type and has a Tich, creamy color, possessing a large amount of gluten which is so vitally necessary to successful bread making.

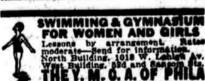

This flour is sharp or has a granulated feel to the hand. I mean that it does not feel or look like a starch.

This flour will afford a vigorous fermentation and will give a well-rise.

Durum wheat is an extremely hard ally has two coats of the bran removed.

Mousquetaire gloves—8, 12 and 16 button lengths Duplex Gloves, 2 clasp and strap wrist Novelty gloves several styles.

Lowest price we have ever quoted on gloves of these types. They're from one of the best makers of fabric gloves in America-a manufacturer who produces only high-grade goods.

The gloves are in the most fashionable styles of the Spring season and there are plenty of the soft covert, cafe au lait and beaver shades, so hard to get, as well as white, biscuit, walnut and chamois. Also plenty of long white gloves.

Some of the novelty gloves have Van Dyck points or pearl buckles. If you have very sharp eyes and look very closely you may find a tiny oil spot or a small irregularity in the threads of some of them, but so slight are they that they do not impair the service or appearance of a single pair of these excellent

All sizes in the collection (plenty of size 61/2), though not all sizes in every style. Fine choosing in the lot for a Summer's supply.

The Man Who Wants a Spring Suit Now Wants a Good One All-Wool Suits, $32.50

Fine all-wool cloths are used exclusively-plenty of Springlike grays, some attractive overplaids and a few Men are well pleased with the quality of the material, the tailoring and, considering both of these, the price. For one thing, the suits are all correctly conservative of style—the kind that real men wear, nothing second-rate or tawdry about them. They are right.

Light-Weight Overcoats

are mostly tweeds and herringbones, all-wool of course, but Spring weight, at $22.50 to $34. Many are the days between now and Summer, when one of these will be welcome!
