'CONNIE' TALMADGE WINS OVER REAL PRINCE TO DANCING

MISTER McCLOSKEY, suppose you get the Prince to give a little boxing exhibition, just to show how you keep him in trim. Miss Talmadge is keen to see how you do it. She's heard all about what a clever boxer he is."

Mr. Louis ("Blink") McCloskey, heavyweight sparring partner aide to the distinguished foreigner who was viserd by the British Government as viserd by the British Government as "His Royal Highness, Prince Mohammed Ali Ibrahim." twenty-two years old and said to be the millionaire cousin of the Khedive of Egypt, looked painfully dignified. He was adamant.

It was an extremely tense moment. For Prince Ibrahim, who is giving Brondway and America the "once over," was experiencing his first real his thrill since landing on the shores of big thrill since landing on the shores of the U. S. A., planting himself with a retinue of six retainers in a royal suite at the Biltmore and settling down to the business of thoroughly enjoying a few months of life in America on his widely advertised $200,000-a-year income.

The Prince, you see, was having his first meeting with an honest-to-good-ress American picture star. One of the chief objects of his visit to this country was to meet American film stars, who had won his great admiration in Egypt by their work on the screen. The long looked-for opportunity had come! Some one had tipped off "Blink" that

Some one had tipped off "Blink" that Constance Talmadge was in town between pictures, having recently completed "The Primitive Lover." That settled it. And so, through a third person, a meeting between the Prince and Miss Talmadge was arranged.

Which leads us to that tense moment, Wednesday afternoon (March 15, 1922), in the old Talmadge studies at 318 East Forty-eighth street, where Connie was Forty-eighth street, where Connie was showing her royal visitor around. The persistent gentleman, failing in his overtures to "Blink," took advantage of an opportune moment to suggest to the Prince that it would be real jolly if he and Mr. McCloskey would demonstrate a few of their pet boxing tricks for Miss Talmadge, who is a great sport enthusiast.

"Thanks, but no," firmly refused the l'rince, his good-natured smile reveal-ing a fine set of flashing white teeth. "I'm just here to pay a social call, to "I'm just here to pay a social call, to see the studio and to express my ad-miration of Miss Talmadge's fine work on the screen. I am sure she would not

The persistent one was quite downhearted, but, refusing to give up, re-turned to the heavyweight trainer of the royal boxing devotee. "Mister Blinkroyal boxing devotee. "Mister Blink— or McCloskey, I mean—the Prince is a good sport, and I'm sure you can get him to entertain Miss Talmadge with a few of those nent fighting positions and jabs of his. All you've got to do is say the word."
"Say, listen, brother," replied Me-face suddenly became wreathed in smiles. "That's a horse of another color. The Prince couldn't refuse a lady, y'know. He's too much of a gentleman. Why, if Miss Talmadge asked him to turn somersaults, he'd do it. But she'd better not ask him to dance. That's one thing he will not do."

That's one thing he will not do."

The sun was out of the clouds! There were whisperings. Then Miss Talmadge overcame the reticence of the Prince, and the prettiest little plece of shadow boxing by His Royal Highness, followed by a neat exhibition of barehand love taps between Blink and his boss took place. Miss Talmadge, assisted by Jack O'Brien, famous fight trainer, acted as referee and prevented the Prince's taps on McCloskey from becoming too loving.

"They tell me you don't dance," said Miss Talmadge after the boxing, "and I'm so sorry, because I have always lightly screamed the policeman." Say! Say! Say! Tell that to the judge!" screamed the policeman.

"They tell me you don't dance," said Miss Talmadge after the boxing, "and I'm so sorry, because I have always wanted so much to dance with a Prince. But perhaps you will let me show you a few stens of the fox trot? You really should learn to dance a little."

"Miss Talmadge, I love boxing, mo-toring, golf and all sorts of outdoor sports, but dancing is something I have never cared for. I had resolved not to "But just this once! Won't you let me show you?"

The Talmadge smile was irresistible and-well, the Prince simply couldn't refuse the request of a lady, you know, especially when that lady happened to be a princess of the screen.

It was a big day for His Royal Highness, all right—"the jolliest I have had since coming to New York," as And before he left the studio Prince Ibrahim made a "date" with Miss Talmadge to watch the picturization of her next picture. "East Is West," which stood a big black chap grinning as women can secure fashionable footwear that fits. It fits because designed not to deform but to fit. The natural sole-line, the rounded toes and the stylishly low heel, all help. And the Cantilever arch, flexible like your own, is the final need. That arch draws up, when you lace, to give each arch of yours exactly the degree of support needed. That flexible arch also bends willingly with every step you take, giving you a freedom of action that holds off fatigue, and allowing that strengthening exercise of muscles which corrects and prevents weak arches.

When you slip your feet into Cantiadays are riots. I wonder if Dumas would ever recognize his story with Nazimova as Marguerite. 'Naz' certainly can make faces. Ye Gods of Troy! "Both the Talmadge sisters are mar-ried, are they not? Could you tell me where the ceremonies took place?"

When you slip your feet into Canti-lever Shoes, you secure your fit. What that will mean to you in the way of improved circulation, higher color and better spirits you don't need to be told. Let us show you a pair on you feet. Widths AAAA to E.

Jack and Janet, who have won magic fairy caps by rescuing Flitter-Flash, the fairy prince, from Black Dragon and Hairy Ogre, lose the caps, but regain them as a reward for saving the nest of Cocky and Merry Robin from Black Tom, the cat. They see a funny, hopping, red-vested fat man and fat woman, and while laughing at them are arrested by two queer-looking policemen.

Excepting among the closest friends, familiarity is always bad form. At that, there are lifelong friends, deeply attached to one another, who would never think of using greetings so familiar as nudging with the elbow, clapping on the shoulder, etc. Certain respect must be maintained among friends, even among relations.

So, when a mere acquaintance halls another, especially a woman, by placing his hand on the other's arm or shoulder while speaking, he is committing a gross offense against good taste. This is what old-fashloned writers consider man by the buttonhote of his cont so that he cannot escape the too-familiar a acquaintance. Men "on the street" learn to shake off these "jolly good fellow" bores, as so many burs caught in passing. It is much more embarrassing for a woman to meet the type of man who does not realize that his familiar actions are as vulgar as they are annoying.

Nothing was said about it, but there is a suspicion that His Royal Highness is now looking forward to some more dancing lessons.

Jack and Jet wirled around. There stood a big black chap grinning as them. But he wasn't an ordinary black man, He, too, was one of the queer people. He was dressed all in black, his face was black, and he had a long black mouth. "Say! Say! Say! Get on the patrol

Can You Tell? By R. J. and A. W. Bodmer What Bird Can Fly Backward

The idea of flying machines undoubtedly came from watching birds in flight, and yet man has become so proficient in flying that today he is able to fly in at least one direction that the average bird cannot. An airplane can fly backward. The average bird cannot.
Only one kind of bird familiar to us can fly backward and that is the hummingbird. Whether he could continue
