—A decision as to the negotiations of single-State wage agreements by the union coal miners was expected in union circles here today to be the most important question to be determined by the General Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers of America at its meeting tomorrow in Cleveland.

On the committee's decision will hinge the extent of the strike in the soft coal fields of the country, and the opinion prevailed at the union's headquarters here that a majority of the committeemen favored a tie-up of all union fields beginning April 1.

The single-State agreement proposal, however, was expected to provoke a clash within the committee, bringing to the fore the factional fight between International President John L. Lewis and Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois district union. Opposition to the proposal has been declared by Mr. Lewis, and in turn Mr. Farrington has declared in favor of it. Some support of Mr. Farrington was regarded as possible from the officials of the partly organized union districts, where the fight between the union and the open shop is keen.

Besides the separate agreement proposal, the committee may adopt a general program for the conduct of the progress.

None of the executive officers of the International Union was at headquarters here today, President Lewis and Vice President Murray being in New York, and Secretary William Green leaving during the day for the Cleveland meeting.

The object of Lloyd George in the Genoa conference is made out to be the avoidance of the necessity of reducing Germany and Russia to the posi-tion of servant States. He wasted the time of 39 printers

DO you pay for this?

A letter was recently sent to 39 printers in different cities, asking for an estimate on the same job.

Every one of these printers was expected to devote time to figuring out a competitive bid on this one job.

All this costs so much money and is so unnecessary.

Most catalog and booklet printing is done with the idea of helping the sale of goods. To lose sight of this idea means to lose sight of the purpose of your printing.

If you do not keep the purpose of your printing in mind, how can you expect the printer to keep it in mind?

If you both forget that the purpose of your printing is to sell goods, you are not likely to get the kind of printing that makes sales.

Better paper makes for better printing, and better printing makes for better selling.

for ten minutes.

A few years ago we decided to make a shaving cream. We had already achieved the ideal toilet soap by blending palm and olive oils. So we embodied this blend in a shaving cream. And our first step was to ask a thousand men the virtues they wanted in it. These were their requirements:

First, a quick shave

These men wanted quick shaves, above all. Did not like long brushing, finger rubbing, hot towels, delay. So a cream was made which acts in one minute. Within that time the average beard absorbs 15% of water. This result is due to almost instant removal of the oil that coats the beard.

Next, liberal lather

Next, they wanted liberal lather. They wanted a little of the soap to go far. So we developed a cream which multiplies itself 250 times in lather. A bit on the brush—only one-half inch—suffices for a shave. A single tube of Palmolive Shaving Cream serves for many weeks of shaving comfort.
