The teason preceding this gave you as outline of the wheat grain and set history of the flour made from grain. Wheat is milled into three ties of flour, known as whole it, graham and the shandard patwhich is the white flour, we use in his our white bread.

The standard set for judging a good of bread is as follows: Good a should be light, resounding and all raised. It should have a minimum if per cent of golden brown crust; is, somewhat diment to detach the crumb. The color of the wab should be a clear, creamy white, it a pleasing oddr, and if dried in a syen should not lose more than 38 cent of its total weight.

After standing twelve hours bread is the search of the total weight.

Clean out the mixing bowl and rub the bowl liberally with shortening; then place in the dough, press to the bottom and turn over. Cover and set away in a place free from drafts to rise for three and one-half hours. At the end of this time take out the dough and punch down and turn over; then cover and let stand for one hour; now turn on the board and it is ready to form the stand for baking all sweet doughs:

Three-quarter cup of finely chopped candided ginger.

Beat to blend and then turn in a cake pan with a tube in the center, first greating well then dusting with the flour. Fill the pan about one-half full and set away in a place that is warm and free from drafts to rise until the dough nearly fills the pan. Then bake in moderate oven for thirty-five minutes.

Shape into loaves and place in well-rased loaf-shaped pan and stand in varm place for forty-five minutes, then bake in a moderate oven for thirty-five minutes. Turn from the pan and when cold place in bread box.

This dough can be used for various syles of making bread, as well as for farker House rolls, yeast raised biscuit and cinnamon buns.

A SPRING COSTUME

Can You Tell? By R. J. and A. W. Bodmer

The Origin of the Military Solute

We have even the soldier raise his right hand to his cap in meeting an officer, and many of us have wondered how the salute originated.

In Roman times, when assantinations were of frequent occurrence, the coston was entrollahed that inferiors, when coming into the presence of their superiors, must raise the right hand, helding it with the palm turned outward to show that the hand was empty and contained no weapon. From this lies come the custom of saluting.

Until recent years a sentinel, when accosted, removed his hat as well as saluting with his gun. This was done in the British army at the time of the American Revolution. The headdress of those days was far different from the plain army hat of the present day, and it was a difficult matter for a soldier, while saluting with his gun, to remove his hat as well. This was therefore changed to the custom of raising the hand to the brim of the hat in saluting.

Similarly interesting is the reason for the hand to the brim of the hat in saluting.

Similarly interesting is the reason for asking witnesses to remove their gloves before being sworn. In the old days when a person broke the laws of the times and became a criminal, it was the custom, upon conviction, to brand him on the paim of his right hand. In being sworn as a winsem the raising of the uncovered right hand with palm outward, would disclose to those present whether the person about to give testimony had a criminal record or not. A criminal is not a credible witness.
