Deluded Wives By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Judith Carlyle is a deluded wife because, when Rand, her husband, tells his business and comes to New York to be an artist, she refuses to adapt herself to the new life.

Consequences

RAND realized the minute he had rung off that he had acted on impulse. He had never voluntarily invited any one to the studio, knowing that Judy did not care for the people he liked.

We always contract the muscles around our eyes during a violent or even a slight spell of coughing. This is a wise provision of nature to protect the eyes from the excessive blood pressure.

The Quarrel of a Pair of Lovers Happened to Turn Out the Right Way

And So It Was a Good Thing for Them—But Most Quarrels Leave a Nasty Taste in the Mouth and Should Be Avoided

"WHEN I think what a fool I've been!" exclaimed the good-looking girl who was hemming a handkerchief.

Her voice was full of regret and remorse. She should have been hemming a napkin or tablecloth or dish towel for her new home instead of just a handkerchief.

By that time she should have been putting the finishing touch to her trousseau and her hope chest.

But five months before that, she had quarreled with the man to whom she would surely have been engaged long ago under ordinary conditions.

And had quarreled in such a foolish, unnecessary way.

It was just pride, silly pride, too, which made her quarrel with him, and which made her quarrel with him.

For she was sorry. She realized her folly, too late; she regretted it so very, very deeply; and she knew him well enough to be sure that he would never come back until he was good and ready to.

If he went on feeling as he did when he left, he would come back, she knew that.

But when? And what would she do if he should stop caring or learn to care for some one else in the meanwhile?

And so it went on with unhappiness and stubborn pride on her side.

and unhappiness and hurt pride and stubborn determination on his part, for five months.

IT WAS the day after she came home as she sat on the porch listlessly hemming that she expressed her self-contentment.

That evening she was to see him again, and she was "all a-twitter" with hopes and fears and wonderings and regrets for the long separation and joy for the reconciliation.

That was last fall and they are married now, almost a year from the quarrel.

And I wonder whether she was any the worse off for her bitter experience?

We always say that lovers' quarrels are unnecessary and foolish, a waste of time.

And it is certain that this one was, for instead of having all summer to get her household things and clothes together, and find a house to live in, this bride had to wait all through the winter and have a windy, cold, March wedding.

Yet, while we should never encourage or advise lovers' quarrels, we cannot help seeing what a fine this one will prove in the years to come.

Any other outburst of pride or temper will always recall that one fatal one.

Indeed, it is doubtful whether pride or temper will ever get so far as to burst out, with the memory of those twenty months of misunderstanding and loneliness reaching out of the past with a warning finger upraised.

IF A QUARREL has to come some time it is better that it should come before marriage than afterward, pro-

Please Tell Me What to Do By CYNTHIA

Objects to His Smoking Dear Cynthia—I have moved here lately and met a nice boy who loves me. He likes me very much. But there is one thing I don't like and that is that he smokes.

I don't like it. I wish you would tell me a way to make him stop. He stopped, but he started again. I have taken all the smoking material that he used.

You certainly are a high-handed young person. Why should not the young man smoke in moderation?

About Flappers Dear Cynthia—is a young lady considered a flapper if she has bobbed hair? Do boys like it? I have it, but it's very curly and long. Also, can you tell me if a girl who follows a company tell in fun their friends that they are married, can they ever claim each other? We are in a sort of rose-bud stage, and now my boy friend tells me he can claim me as his wife. I am this nervous.

My friend also tells me that I am an old maid because I won't go out to stay at home. I am a regular home body, and enjoy being there rather than being out.

Flapper is usually applied to the young girl of the twenties. It was used originally in England, and many contend it is a symbolical of the first flapping of the wings of the little bird trying its wings for the first time. Bobbed hair has nothing to do with it.

Such things said in fun cannot be taken too seriously. It is only teasing you. But it's always wiser not to say these things in fun.

He Forces His Attention Dear Cynthia—I have told a young man over and over again to please stop. But he won't. He says that he does not care to take my part of it seriously. He asked me if he might call and see me. I said no, but he distinctly said that I would not be home. On Saturday I went to my girl friend's house and he came to see me. When I came home (which was about 11:30 P. M.) I found him there. Now, I don't think I did anything to hurt his feelings, as he has always been a very good friend to me, but I did not want to see him. He was going to be very angry at him for coming when I told him not to. I went to bed without saying anything but "Good night." The next day he called me on the telephone. He knew I was going to be home, and he said that I did not want him to. He did not want him to. He did not want him to. He did not want him to.

What I want to know is this: Did I do wrong in going to bed without having anything to say to him? And please tell me, Cynthia, what to say to him (without hurting his feelings) that I don't want him to call so often, but just once in a while. MISS EIGHTEEN.

The young man should not have called after you told him you would not be at home. While it would have been more polite to stop and speak for a short time, he was certainly not polite to force himself upon you.

But you are kindly but firmly that while you are glad to see him once in a while, you cannot give him so much of your time as he wishes.

A Hard Problem Dear Cynthia—After roaming the world over I met the girl of my dreams. She is under the impression that I am a well-to-do business man, as at present I am doing something that brings me quite a large income.

Never before have I had the desire to make her my wife, and I would do so in my power to do this honestly if I could. If you could understand, Cynthia, my position, would you give me different outlook on life than a man who has gone straight from the start.

My present line of work to do to give that would be called honesty, as I feel that I may give way to my natural feelings and start where I have left off, and I do not see that I can do a lot to me and is more than I think I can do.

And to explain, things to her, and I have not time to do so. I have a number of things to explain to her, and I have not time to do so. I have a number of things to explain to her, and I have not time to do so.

You is indeed a problem, and while Cynthia wishes she could advise you to marry and let things take their course, she does not see that you would be wise to do so, for old associations will be sure to crop up, and few women will forgive the deceit.

It's very hard, but you had better tell her the truth. What you have been doing is to let her know you have made up your mind to be from now on, but how you feel for yourself. Tell her if she will stand by you you will cut off all of the past and start straight. But you must be sure to be honest with her, and you must be sure to be honest with her.

And I am sure that you will be able to do so, for old associations will be sure to crop up, and few women will forgive the deceit.

WHAT'S WHAT By Helen Decie

Shad, or other large fish, is often served "planked"; that is, roasted, broiled or baked on a plank of oval board. When the fish is nearly cooked, spoonfuls of mashed potatoes are arranged around it in a sort of rose-bud effect. A few extra minutes in the oven will give a golden tinge to the border.

Planking fish is a method of cooking the host at a dinner, or before the hostess at a women's luncheon, who places a portion of fish in a hot pan on each plate as it is passed.

Planking is the most festive way to serve any fish dinner or luncheon. It should be separated from the fish on the plate with the fork, but if, by chance, a bone is taken into the mouth it can be rejected unobtrusively into the napkin.

How to Change a Name To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—I've never written to you before, but I've never received my name, and I would like to know what I should do to change my name, and what the fee?

How can I get a postoffice box? Where should I get a STEADY READER? Your letters must have some stray in them, as I have never received any. I have never received any. I have never received any.

All About Her Looks To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Will you kindly tell me how to use boric acid for the eyes and what is the necessary form? My eyes are white. Will you kindly tell me how to get them red? I do not want to use boric acid. I do not want to use boric acid.

Boric acid is not necessary at all except for a baby. But it is very soothing and strengthening as a lotion when your eyes are tired. Fill an eye cup with the proper solution of the boric acid, which you can buy in powdered form, and mix with water for the liquid form, and then invert the eye cup on your eye, rolling the eye about so that the boric acid touches every part of it. But if your eyes are not tired or sore there will be no need of your using this lotion.

Whenever you wash your face in warm water finish off by bathing it in cold water and finally with ice, so that the circulation will be stirred up. This will give you color in your cheeks and in your lips as well. But you will have to combine this treatment with lots of fresh air and regular exercise taken outdoors if possible, in order to keep your blood circulating and rich in the number of times I have been in the best of health in this country, and I have never done any honest but very hard work in my life.

viding, that is, that it turn out as this one did. Unfortunately, there is not always this provision, and when we know what these two young people suffered from their quarrel, and what a terrific chance they ran of having it end unhappily, we should do everything in our power to avoid that possibility.

The harm done by avoidable quarrels is more than overbalances, and the safest way to avoid them is to make them all avoidable "by hook or by crook."
