Men Are Counting the Days Until Easter on One Hand, While the Other Points Out the Clothes They Will Wear on Easter

At Late Sunset, From the Deck of a Little Boat

Upon the half-mile-wide St. John's River, the water was burnished with gold, and the westernmost sky with sapphire, built upon banks of orange and dark green, deepening as the shadows of the evening came on to form the framing of the lustrous stars of the night.

Is it not true that to many of us sunsets are given beyond our vision if we do not stop long enough to catch the glory and the meaning of the goodnight message of the sky?
