Women Voters Flock to Register

lean Party workers are out in full force registering the Republican vote. The indications are that 95 per cent of the divisions are fully manned by regular Republican workers and there is little or no interest being taken by independents, there being very few independent workers at the polls.
In the registration of last year for the local campaign, women registered and enrolled in disappointingly small numbers. Although no official record was made of the women voters as distinct from the men voters, it was estimated that not more than 70,000 registered. Women leaders made a tremendous drive today to get the women vote enrolled.
This drive is the culmination of a quiet campaign by the women in a door-to-door canvass, particularly in the independent wards. The women used a blue system assigning each woman canvasser a definite number of houses to visit.
The registration and enrollment today will show how the wind is blowing. A heavy registration in Philadelphia as well as in Pittsburgh and Scranton, would hearten independents with a genuine feeling of victory. Even organization leaders concede that a big registration, especially in Philadelphia, would mean a serious blow to be aimed at the Combine.
Pinchot makes the point that a large registration will be fatal for the bosses. They say the Combine can be beaten. They argue that if the machine voters in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, which is the majority of the Alter candidacy, can be held down by a strong independent vote, then the interior counties will push the State Forester over the goal line on May 16.
More than 225,000 men and women are eligible for registration and enrollment in Philadelphia alone. If a large percentage of this total should be registered today the bosses would have to be sorry at once without waiting for election day.

Why the Bosses Tremble
The total eligible voters is 758,024, whose names are on the assessors' lists, and therefore qualified to apply for registration. Of this total, 432,196 were registered for the election of last year, and are by that fact registered for the coming primaries unless they have moved or changed their party status. In the latter event corrections may be made on the books today.
The number eligible to register today is the difference between the total registered, 432,196, and the total assessed, 758,024, which is 325,828.
The average last year for each of three registration days was 140,000 voters. On the "big day" a total of 170,500 men and women were registered. If only 140,000 men and women did their names to the books today, then a grand total of nearly 573,000 would be ready for the primary election. That total, which is not as large as it may be, would be enough to strike terror in the hearts of the bosses.

Each of the headquarters for the gubernatorial candidates made special efforts to get their supporters registered. Premier women, marshaled by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot and Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton, called for registration in every division.
Women Tour Ward for Pinchot
Mrs. Sylvia Van Rensselaer Sharp, 5022 Chestnut street, moved to be one of the most active Pinchot workers in the city. She toured the Forty-sixth Ward in a motor-car and brought women voters to the registration places.
Mrs. Sharp attended last night at an enthusiastic Pinchot meeting in her home. She mailed pamphlets to all women on the assessors' list. The pamphlets contained pledges to support the forester at the primary.

There was a big turnout at the City Club luncheon to hear Mr. Pinchot speak.
"The trouble with the government of Pennsylvania," he said, "is that it is not run, as it should be, for the purpose of getting the State's business well done at reasonable cost to the taxpayer. The trouble is that certain political leaders have for years been making use of it for purposes very different from the service of the people. They work on the theory that a public office is a private mine, and they come very close to mining it just that."
"Nobody doubts that public officials sworn to serve the people have delicately increased the burden of taxation by spending the people's money for their own personal advantage, and nobody likes to expect the little group of men who profit by it. The people have submitted hitherto, but unless I am utterly mistaken they will not submit much longer."

"State Government Bad"
"The government of Pennsylvania is what the politicians have made it, a poor business organization. Its finances are in confusion; it does not pay its debts when they are due, and its current liabilities appear to be much greater than its assets."
"The organization of the State departments is bad. Instead of a closely knit body, each going its own way, with no system of co-operation between them; no common standards of good work; no common standards of payment for services rendered; no real supervision in the public interest."
"If the government of Pennsylvania were a private business organization it would today be broke. Its management is so poor that it could not stay in business at all in competition with other firms. Its directors, the politicians who officiously control it, are using the business to feather their own nests. It is beginning to look now as if the stockholders, who are the people, had had enough of it all and were going to have a change."
"It will not be easy to put the State government in order, but it can be done. Six months of what is needed can be done without any new laws, just by running the government to serve the people—not to serve the politicians. I believe I know precisely what is needed, for I learned that trade under Roosevelt. I have actually done it for one of the departments. If I am elected Governor I will do it for all the rest."

FISHER WON'T DENY
HE WILL WITHDRAW

State Banking Commissioner Fisher became a target for questions as soon as he appeared at the Bellevue-Stratford for the Rotary Club luncheon.
Reports he was about to withdraw from the race for Governor have been in circulation through the State. Such action would be a turning point in the campaign. It would leave a clear-cut issue between Attorney General Alter, the machine candidate, and Gifford Pinchot, the independent.
"Where have you been for the last twenty-four hours?" Mr. Fisher was asked as he entered an elevator.
"I have been out in the woods," he replied with a smile.
"Are you out of the woods now?"
"Well, I am in Philadelphia."
The Banking Commissioner stepped from the elevator and tried to get away from interviewers. He appeared annoyed at their persistence. He was told of persistent reports that he was about to get out of the fight.
"I have no statement to make now," he said. "Remember that the candidacy, if backed, would weaken his position," he replied.
"I realize its effect, but I want to talk to some of my friends, when I do make a statement it will be a very definite statement."

"Do you want the impression to go out that you are about to withdraw?"
"I know that impression will go out," Mr. Fisher said.
"Do you want it to go out?" a questioner persisted.
"No," he said.
"Are you going to withdraw?"
"I will not say anything now," he fired back with an air of finality and irritation. "When I make a statement it will be definite."
The Grand's interests, who are Mr. Fisher's chief supporters, have stated that they will not support Attorney General Alter in any event.
Mr. Fisher and the Attorney General are friends, and it is regarded as possible the State Banking Commissioner, if he withdraws, will declare for Alter.
But supporters of Pinchot are convinced that if Fisher gets out of the fight it will mean the transfer of great blocks of votes to the Independent cause. At the Fisher headquarters in the Franklin Trust Building today the workers gave out a telegram from Plumville, Pa., the home town of Fisher's childhood, which assured the Banking Commissioner that Plumville and South Mahoning are solid for him.

CANDIDATES TO SPEAK

Pinchot, Fisher, Pepper and Reed to Be Guest Tonight of Woman's Club
Two candidates for Governor and two for United States Senator will face a "bring line" of critical voters tonight, when they appear at the first political dinner and conference of the Republican Women's Club of Pennsylvania, Attorney General George E. Alter, the organization's "slated" candidate, is the only one of the three aspirants for Governor, who will not attend the banquet to be given in the Bellevue-Stratford. He notified the committee today that he will be in Pittsburgh.

Gifford Pinchot, the Chief Forester, whose candidacy already has won the support of the majority of women voters in the State, and John S. Fisher, Banking Commissioner from Indiana, will both speak.
George Wharton Pepper and David A. Reed, candidates for the United States Senate, completes the list of political aspirants on the program.
Owing to the length of the program, Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, president of the club, has announced that the dinner would start promptly at 7 o'clock. An informal reception in honor of the candidates for office and other speakers will take place in the ante-room previous to the dinner.

NAVY BILL'S FATE IN DOUBT
Both Sides Claim Victory on Final Day of Debate

Washington, April 12.—(By A. P.)—As the House proceeded with its third and last day of general debate on the 1923 naval budget, leaders urging and opposing an "enrolled" strength of 65,000 claimed votes enough in sight today to win on a straight test on the big point at issue. This may be reached until next week.
Representatives Rogers, Massachusetts; Britton, Illinois; McArthur, Oregon, and other Republicans in charge of the fight for 80,000 declared pledges had been received from a sufficient number of members to defeat the committee figure. Leaders on the other side asserted the bill would go through the house substantially as framed.

Then Topples and Dies
An instant later he toppled over and was carried to the college infirmary, where he died without regaining consciousness a few minutes later.
"We require members of the freshman class to engage in physical exercise daily, and golf is a favorite sport with the majority of the boys," said Frederick Palmer, dean of the college today.
"An investigation was made immediately after the accident. From what I ascertained, one of the freshmen swung at the ball and young Turner stepped up behind him just in time to receive the blow on the head. From what I have learned I am positive the death of Turner was purely accidental."

Authorities Hear Details
Coroner Drewes, of Delaware County, and Chief of Police Scannlin, of Havreford Township, conducted an investigation in the college at 7:30 o'clock last night. Thomas was summoned before the two officials, and in a voice choked with emotion related the incidents of his club's death.
There were six freshmen in the party,

Week's Wash is Burned
Fire in the home of Frank Garuguo, at 2033 North Twenty-second street, early this morning destroyed the week's wash, which lay in tubs ready to be soaked. The owner believes that a cigarette tossed through a grating above the tubs, which are in the cellar, was responsible for the blaze. It was extinguished before the arrival of firemen.
