LADY DOYLE SEES CHILDLESS HEAVEN
Believes Maternal Longing Will Be Satisfied in Some Other Way
"NO LONELY SOULS THERE"

New York, April 14.—Lady Doyle, the helpmeet in spiritual conviction as in all else of her husband, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, put into the words of the wife in her yesterday's lecture the meaning of the great light of spiritualism, which both believe must be disseminated until in the end it sweeps the world entire.
Handsome and vigorous, her dark hair lightly touched with gray, her deep gray eyes glowing with her thought as she sat in her drawing room at the Hotel Ambassador, the wife of the English author was as vividly inspired as a zealot of old.
"My children," she said, with a softened note in her clear voice, "do not fear death any more than passing through a door into the room beyond. They know that on the other side of that door they will find their friends and love and the bright, happy life they have known here."
"How do I know what is awaiting them? Through those dear ones who have passed on and through the mediums who have told me what their home is like."
"There will be no lonely souls on the other side. Those who have departed love and never found it here will find it there, for in that blessed life they tell us people walk in two in a human love."
"There will be no children," Lady Doyle continued, though she admitted children were the expression of a perfect thought, but added, "do not say, however, that the maternal yearning will be in some way worked out, that there will be others to mother. I have consoled so many with this knowledge that after death they will find the perfect marriage like mine."
The Doyles attend no spiritualistic church in England because Sir Arthur had all churches and so modify their tenets as to include this religion. He refuses to accept any remuneration for his lectures on spiritualism.
"I could not teach my children a hell where they would be punished eternally," went on Lady Doyle, "any more than I could teach them to be afraid of God. I don't know how it is in America, but in England only ten in every 100 go to the regular churches, but the spiritualistic churches are jammed."
Cambridge, Mass., April 14.—It seemed that the great secret of the ancient alchemists—the nature of "first matter"—is the esemplum of the modern spiritualist, said S. Foster Damon, a graduate student at Harvard University, in an interesting lecture.
Mr. Damon was named by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in a lecture Wednesday night in New York as the man who had established the fact that the alchemists were familiar with esemplum, described by spiritualists as a combination of matter and ether emanating from the bodies of mediums, which makes possible spirit manifestation.

'DEATH BEAUTIFUL,' CONWELL AGREES
But Head of Temple University Won't Accept A. Conan Doyle in Toto
PINS HIS FAITH TO BIBLE

"I have seen many men die," said Dr. Russell H. Conwell, in commenting today upon theories and doctrines advanced by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in his lectures on spiritualism, "and I have seen that lifting of the hands and that lighting up of the face of dying people which lead him to believe that they are beholding beautiful and kindly faces above them. I think that this is very probably true."
To this extent Dr. Conwell is willing to concede the possibility of Sir Arthur's beliefs, but beyond that he will not go.
"The Bible is my guide in spiritualism, as in all things," he said. "There are many instances of spiritualism in the Bible, such as the visitations of angels, visions of the world beyond, and prophecies."
"It is a marvelous book, which has stood the test of ages as no other has, and I regard it as my authority in all matters."
Dr. Conwell laid his hand upon a small magazine upon the table.
"Now here," he said, "is a discussion of spiritualism and mysticism done in a truly scientific way. It is a review of a book on the subject by the great French astronomer, Flammarion."
"With Conan Doyle it is different. He is a great fiction writer, with a highly developed imagination. I do not say that his imagination runs away with him, but I think that his tendency in that direction has its effect upon his investigations and researches. That after death they will find the perfect marriage like mine."
When asked of his beliefs in the matter of physical manifestations, such as rappings, knockings and so forth, Dr. Conwell said:
"In many cases I think it probable that electricity in some form is responsible for these mysterious things. Either the air is charged with natural or artificial electrical currents, or the chain of contacts formed by the joined finger-tips of the persons engaged in the experiment in some way generate enough electricity to cause a snapping or crackling sound, which might be mistaken for a rap."
"As for me and my attitude toward the future life, I look to my Bible, and find it written that 'all of us are like unto the angels in heaven. That one simple statement seems to me to cover the whole question of the life hereafter and its relationships to us here on earth.'"
DEATH MAY SEAL FOREVER IRISH VENGEANCE MYSTERY
Former Sinn Feiner Attacked Savagely in N. Y. Residential Section
New York, April 14.—(By A. P.)—Death seemed to be hanging by the bedside of Patrick Connor in the Reconstruction Hospital, and ready to seal, perhaps forever, the mystery attending the savage and apparently premeditated attack upon him last night in one of the most exclusive residence sections of the city.
The man who fired four shots into Connor's body had been lying in wait for him near Central Park. He was seen by a number of persons conversing with another man and a girl, who are being sought by the authorities.
Connor, injured late in the evening before he could tell the name of his assailant, and members of his family were gaunt when questioned. Many reports named a former Sinn Feiner, had been down in retribution for having betrayed his Irish compatriots to the British.
The police stated they had learned the former Sinn Feiner had been under the surveillance of several men in the last few weeks. Reports that Connor was trailed whenever he left the house were being investigated. A woman who stood near one of the assailants told the police she heard him say when he shot Connor: "We've got you now," and uttered an oath.
TOOK DAYS TO SAW SAFE
Mystery of Sicilian Bank Robbery Cleared by Confession of Guard
CANTANIA, Sicily, April 14.—(By A. P.)—Mystery surrounding the theft of $1,000,000 lire from the local branch of the Banco di Sicilia, a week ago, has been cleared up by the confession of the bank's guard, Martorano.
Several days were consumed in engineering the robbery. Martorano told the police. The iron bolts and bars of the safe deposit vault were sawed one by one, and the cracks filled with black wax to prevent detection.
CITY OF SYDNEY "BROKE"
Can't Pay Any More Salaries Till June Taxes Come In
SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 14.—(By A. P.)—This city, due to coal strikes and long depression in the steel industry, is "broke," according to Mayor Fitzgerald. Until June no more checks for city salaries will be signed, the Mayor announces, because there are no funds at the bank to meet such paper.
The oversight allowed the city government by law—$214,000—has been expended, and there is no way of raising money until June, when taxes become legally collectable.

A Wedding Gift of Silver which comes from the store of Bailey, Banks and Biddle Company, Jewelers, Silversmiths, Stationers, is always sure of winning the deepest appreciation.
Delora Sagan
"JUST look at this wonderful Chest of Flat Silver!" said the little bride as with pleasure she showed her Wedding Gifts. "Did you ever see anything like it?" I noticed that it was from the store of Bailey, Banks and Biddle Company and that it was most complete and encased in a handsome chest of mahogany. "I am so pleased," she went on, "with all my Silver. My friends consulted with my family, so that all my pieces are of the same pattern, and all from Bailey's. Silver is always a singularly appropriate gift for the new home, as it does, for generations, and bringing pride and happiness to the possessor."
"I THOUGHT that you wore glasses?" "I do when I am reading or working." "But how is it that they do not leave a mark on your nose?" "Oh, I wear Comfort Spectacles, made by Wall & Ochs, Opticians, 1716 Chestnut Street." Wall & Ochs' Comfort Spectacles are made with a nose-piece especially constructed to prevent them from marring the bridge of the nose and also to keep them from sliding down. There is everything in having glasses which fit properly so that you look directly through the center of the lenses. And in consulting Wall & Ochs' expert fitters you will procure glasses which combine the qualification with quality and appearance.

DENY MURDER OF DEPORTED ARMENIANS BY THE TURKS
State and Labor Departments' Probe Finds Reports Unfounded
Washington, April 14.—(By A. P.)—After an investigation made by the State and Labor Departments over a period of three months, it has been definitely determined, Secretary Davis announced today, that no Armenians deported from the United States under the immigration law have been massacred by Turks at Constantinople.
Testimony before the House Immigration Committee last December by witnesses urging modification of the law included circumstantial accounts of the slaughter of one party of seventeen Armenians immediately after their return from the United States to Constantinople.
"After leaving no avenue of useful investigation unexplored," Secretary Hughes wrote to Mr. Davis in a letter given out today, "the American High Commission at Constantinople was unable to find the slightest evidence to substantiate the rumor to which you have invited my attention."
Mr. Hughes further intimated the statement of a member of the Armenian party who declares that he had seen "a special difficulty upon our arrival at Constantinople."
Ruth Larned, secretary of the Commission, told of the check made upon the present list of a number of the deportees in Constantinople, showing that all of the number who had been traced were ignorant of any outrages or murders perpetrated.

Every Man His Own Wife—By J. P. McEVROY
How to Change Pillow Slips
THE man who named them pillow slips had a beautiful sense of humor. If there is one thing a pillow slip will not do, it is slip. A pillow will slip, yes, but not a pillow slip.
Perhaps they were called that after this man tried to put one of them on and observed what the pillow did meanwhile. But then he didn't have the benefit of the knowledge which I am about to place at your disposal. He probably went at it by tucking the pillow around his adenoids, clamping his chin down on it, clinching his teeth into it and then pulling the slip on from the opposite end.
Very dumb-but!
THE proper method is first to measure your pillow and then obtain a slip three sizes larger than the proper fit. You can determine what is the proper fit by trying it on first. If it can't go on it is the correct size.
There is still a better way—hire some woman to do it for you.
