DUGAN DUE TO HUMP, HUB FANS RAZZ HIM

"Bing" Miller Sparkles, While Disappearing Joseph Flivs in Athletics' Victory Over Red Sox—"Tilly" Walker, Welch and Rommel Share in Triumph

Boston, Mass., April 15.—Dugan, the jumping Joseph, will be hurdling the Hub soon. The solves are on him. If there is anything that annoys the dashing Dugan it is the bleacher blasts. It was the shrieks from the stands in Philadelphia that twice caused the former Holy Cross star to fade mysteriously from the locker room of Shibe Park.

Judge Landis Is Shocked at "Pop" Anson's Death

Chicago, April 15.—Judge Kene-saw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, was deeply shocked when informed of the death of "Pop" Anson.

Not "Pop" Anson? You don't mean my old pal "Pop" is dead?" he exclaimed.

When assured that it was "Pop" Anson the baseball commissioner said: "Oh, I just can't say anything. He was such a wonderful fellow. And to think that he's dead!"

HARVARD REPORT DIRECTOR ASKS INVESTIGATION

Made No Threat of Dropping Princeton—Crimson Director Broad-Minded

RAPS GRADUATE "AID"

Cambridge, Mass., April 15.—"It is true that Harvard, at the threat of dropping Princeton from the football schedule, virtually forced the investigation and recent disqualification of eight-teen athletes."

The question was put frankly before Fred C. Moore, graduate manager of athletics at the local university, for such was the rumor after Gilroy, McNamara, Wittmer and other famed Tiger stars were declared ineligible.

"No," he shouted rather indignantly, and his first pointed additional emphasis on his desk blotter in his private office of the athletic association.

"No," he said again, "it is not true, and—"

He hesitated a few minutes while he pulled vigorously on his long black cigar.

"Furthermore, Harvard did not even suggest or hint at an investigation. It was a matter for Princeton to discover and deal with."

"It may be that Dean McClelland heard rumors regarding the affairs of some of the Princeton athletes and that may have prompted the investigation, but I'm quite sure that these rumors didn't come from here, either."

Know Nothing of It

"I know nothing of it until it was placed in my hands by the Princeton officials which passes on the eligibility of students at Princeton, Yale and Harvard in all cases except scholastic difficulties."

"The Harvard graduate manager is a broad-minded sports director. He stands in back of the professional coach in football and is in favor of voting down the motion to ban students who have transferred from another college. Furthermore, he does not criticize the college whose athletes have 'borrowed' money from the alumni. He does, however, rap the graduates."

"This floating rumor notes to the students," he explained, "is just a case of enthusiasm on the part of the alumni. It is done unknown to the college authorities and should be stopped. The colleges cannot be criticized, however, if they have investigated all suspicious cases."

"We have here at Harvard the same rule which prevails at Princeton. An athletic director is a naturally aid which he receives from any source other than that upon which he is naturally dependent."

"This is embodied in the eligibility rules which every student participating in athletics must read, sign and file with the Athletic Association. This is one means of checking up. The Athletic Association should make sure that the eligibility questionnaire is signed and filed."

Transfer

"Then Graduate Manager Moore turned to the problem of transfers. 'I believe it would be a gross injustice,' he said, 'to bar transfer students from athletics. It is unfair to the student and the institution which he is attending.'

"Now I'll tell you why. To the average high school or preparatory school boy a college is a college. As a rule, he does not expect to transfer. He would like to pursue. He might choose any institution that appeals to his fancy."

"After a year or maybe two years in the college, he realizes that he could get more out of his course at another college. He transfers. 'Is there any harm in that? No. 'Now we'll say he enters Harvard and he reports any other college he has attended. He transfers. He does not come in contact with his classmates because seniors, juniors and freshmen, probably are in the courses which he is taking."

"There is no better place to make friends than on the athletic field and if that boy is barred from athletics, he misses a big part of his college education."

"Eligibility rules are strict enough as they are. The transfer student must pass his studies for a whole year before he can re-enter the institution and furthermore he must continue to toe the mark in the classroom. As long as he lives up to the spirit of the rules as well as the letter and the university authorities see that he does, there's no reason why he should be barred from athletics. I am against disqualifying transfer students."

The Center

New England is the center of the movement to do away with the professional coach. Recently an association of athletic colleges in the section and New York State agreed to have a member of the faculty tutor the football team, the rule to go into effect in the fall of 1922.

SUB WIELDS BAT, NORTHEAST WINS

Craig's Pinch Hitting in Ninth Inning Puts Kibosh on West Philly's Hopes

EASY FOR PENN CHARTER

By PAUL PREP

TWAS the ninth inning. The home team was one run behind. Two men were on the bases. And the substitute walked to the plate. He applied nervous "Bingo" (But sat) the ball, and two runners scored, winning the game.

Such was the case when Craig, sub catcher of Northeast High, stepped to the pentagon yesterday afternoon in the first rowing races of the intercollegiate season. Three Red and Blue crews will meet the same number from the West, namely, 150-pound, junior varsity and varsity.

The varsity race will start at 4:30 with the junior varsity at 4 and the 150 at 3:30.

Jim Rugh, who has been rowing No. 6 on the junior varsity eight at Penn ever since the Christmas regatta, was unable to leave the University Hospital yesterday afternoon as the result of an infected foot, and Conch Wright will start Muggler's seat.

The intercollegiate regatta to row gave Wright an opportunity to decide which will be the varsity crew this afternoon. The Red eight, or what has been known in the varsity, will start this afternoon in the feature event.

Muggler in Rugh's Place

Muggler, who goes to the second varsity boat, is a veteran from last year, though not a varsity man. He has been rowing on the third varsity all year and is in excellent shape.

He shared to a certain extent the rowing with the jay vees, and Wright expects him to do every bit as well as Rugh has been doing. Muggler weighs 190 pounds, but Rugh weighed 180. For yesterday afternoon Wright had all three eights on the Schuylkill tuning up. Starts and paddling commenced at the 10 o'clock hour, after which Wright lectured to the twenty-four men who will carry the Red and Blue this afternoon.

The Orange and Blue staged a comeback in the eighth and ninth innings and scored four runs, one more than the Orange, who scored only three, but reached first on McDonald's miff of the third strike in the eighth. He stole second and scored on Captain Pasorella's win. Riley walked and Balderson's sacrifice sent him to second. Boehring singled and Riley went to third. Boehring stole. Then Craig, the substitute, walked to the plate and it was all over.

Northwest was desperate and was fighting hard in the eighth and ninth innings. Balderson's sacrifice sent him to second. Boehring singled and Riley went to third. Boehring stole. Then Craig, the substitute, walked to the plate and it was all over.

Yale Confident

To a man they expect a victory over Penn. This is the first year for Jim Balderson, who is a member of the crew in the George. Last year Guy Nickalls of Englishman, tutored the New Haven eights, but after the defeat by Penn he was supplanted by the Australians.

The other crews also set their sights through a workout yesterday afternoon and announced after the race that his crews were in excellent shape, ready for the race of their lives.

Two Philadelphia boys are members of the Red crew. They are Norman Freeman, stroke of the varsity, and Jack Freeman, stroke of the 150-pound crew. They live at 1822 Spruce street, and prep at St. Paul School.

TROUT SEASON GETS START

In Pennsylvania Today

Salvelinus Fontinalis steps into the sport picture today. Salvelinus Fontinalis is short for Brook Trout, but by whatever name you call him he is just as sporty, and the Knights of the Rod will meet to confirm the statement that he furnishes a moving picture. Yep, the trout season opens in Pennsylvania today.

It will continue until July 15. If all preliminary regulations are met, anglers for the "speckled beauties" are going to have the time of their lives. There are many well-stocked streams in the State, but Pike and Monroe counties will furnish the sport for a majority of the fishermen from Philadelphia and vicinity.

Label Goldblatt and Al Mouradian, who have been out of the Penn arena for several days, will be their respective partners when the Red and Blue meets Columbia on Franklin field.

Goldblatt started a badly sprained ankle last Saturday, and has been unable to play since. Mouradian had a touch of indigestion and was given a rest by Dr. Caries.

With Goldblatt at second and Mouradian in left, the Penn team will be stronger than it has been since the game with the Blue when Eddie Farrell and Bill Lewellyn, ineligible, were in the line-up. There is a strong possibility that Lewellyn will be back in the game after the Easter holidays. He will take an examination next week, and if he passes it will be able to again take his turn on the mound.

Walter Larson, the giant southpaw, will probably take the mound this afternoon against the Morningdawns. He will be backed up by Bill Yadusky for Holy Cross, one of the best college teams in the country, which the Red and Blue meets Monday afternoon.

Scraps About Scappers

Fred Welch, former lightweight champion, is at it. Thirty-six years of age and his twentieth year in boxing, he tonight in Brooklyn, will meet Archie Walker and a promising youngster and, although he has experience, Fred will have no cinch contest.

Two return bouts will be the feature of tonight's program at the National Club. Pat Hennessey will meet Johnny Mack, and Johnny Mack will meet Pat Hennessey. Both bouts, both being enclosed. Preliminary bouts will be between John J. Moran and Battling the Cohen and Al Hestman vs. Charley McCoy.

Mike Credell is being lined up for several bouts in the near future. He will meet Johnny Gill at York Pa., ten rounds, May 15, in an open contest, and will appear at the Ice Palace here in the near future.

Boche Rogers, following his knockout victory over Ned Fitzgerald, is on for matches with Babe Herman, Earl Baird or Ed Moran, and with the champion, Mickey Morris. 105, doesn't bar any one at the Flyweight local.

Leo Dillon, local middleweight, has gone South. He is located in New Orleans now.

Joe Tendler has been training daily at the Ice Palace since Thursday night. He will be back on the mat with Battling Leonard in the near future. He will be back on the mat with Battling Leonard in the near future.

Johnny Ruff and Joe Lynch, who are to meet in a championship match in New York City, will be back on the mat with Battling Leonard in the near future.

Bobby Williams, who met Al Hestman recently, challenges Finky Kaufman, Tommy Denny or any of the other 120-pounders in this vicinity.

Frankie Dalley says: "My champion, Joe Egan, is as big as a heavyweight, but he can out-box any heavyweight in the world. He is the best of the Philadelphia team."

Manuel Charles, a South American featherweight, is in Philadelphia. He will be back on the mat with Battling Leonard in the near future.
