We know there are crippled and men are still in hospitals, still suffer-ing, still paying for the victory they helped to win. So I am glad this charball will give us an opportunity to lp them. While the war was on we were always going to see them and taking them things and giving them lit-tle rides. I am afraid there are not very many doing this good work now, and this ball is going to help, for-

I saw Ernie Coleman in town on Wednesday looking well in a red frock and a top cape of dark blue. She has pretty, fair hair and is jolly and at-tractive. She was wearing gray stockings and patent leather slippers, and her hat was a black straw model made in a very becoming shape.

SPEAKING of becoming, reminds me of Freddie, who takes a great in-terest in his mother's appearance, and nats. He is five years old and he insists on surveying her costume before she leaves the house for any occasion. The other day after she had gone to a tea he came back into the nursery from escorting her to the door and the first had been described by th escorting her to the door and remarked:
"That hat of mother's is just too becaming for anything."

Officers In U. S. Army

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

5.ir—Please give the some informatic concerning the regular army of the United States. I would like to know if it is possible for a private to become an officer through his own efficiency, or is it necessary that he graduates from West Point to 30 80?

Also, what is the reputation of a regular to the average American? I thank you in advance for the peace of mind your answer will give me.

It singeth low in every heart,
We hear it, each and all,
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call.
They throug the silence of the breast,
We see them as of yore,
The kind, the brave, the true, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.

Tis hard to take the burden up

Letters to the Editor

Approves Uncle Bim's Course Sir—At the risk of offending the sensibilities of at least one-half of your readers, I hereby declare my hearty approval of the conduct of Mr. Benjamin Gump in leaving his expected bride waiting at the church.

No. I am not a hardened and cynical bachelor, but a settled Benedick, surrounded by a wife, three growing children, an Airedale terrier and a canary to the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger.

dren, an Airedale terrier and a caunry bird. My tastes are domestic in the ex-treme, and though I don't pretend that ife under mine own vine and figtree has life under mine own vine and ingree has been "one grand sweet song" since Julia and myself plighted each other for better or for worse, I confess to the shudder of apprehension that overcame me a few weeks ago as I watched that siren, the Widow Zander, weaving her web around poor old Uncle Bim (sirens do weave webs, don't they, Mr. Editor?) It was plain as a pikestaff to even as an unobservant person as myself that a diabolic attempt on the part of a de-signing woman to ruin the happiness of a generous if somewhat eccentric man, at the very heyday of his career, was about to be put into execution at the marriage altar, and for no other reason than the sordid one of money. Had this modern Delilah not made the mistake of dropping the diary that told her real sentiments toward the intended victim of her wiles, and if that little memorandum book had not providen-tially fallen into Uncle Bim's hands, tially fallen into Uncle Bim's hands, there is no telling what misery might have befallen an imperiled gentleman.

Yes, I'm mighty glad Mr. Gump took the course he did in averting the catastrophe that threatened him. Drastic action on his part was the only way of escape; and while I know a good many women will condemn these views I have the happy assurance of my Julia that she wholeheartedly approves them.

Julia, by the way, is g jewel, and as she looked over my shoulder a few minutes ago and noted what I had leave the land or America did the most toward winning the war, as I think each did its best. What Princess Mary wore on her wedding day, or how much space her press agents used in the newspapers to write it up or whether an Englishman has a sense of humor and really can see a joke if it is explained.

I cannot see what difference it makes now theather England or America did the most toward winning the war, as I think each did its best. What Princess Mary wore on her wedding day, or whether an Englishman has a sense of humor and really can see a joke if it is explained.

It seems to me that what matters most now that the war is over and Princess Mary is securely married is whether Americans and English and the sale looked over my shoulder a few minutes ago and noted what I had said about our life together not having proved "one grand sweet song." and was inclined to resent the remark, I mollified her instantly by what I said:
"No, my dear, it has been a symphony of continuous delight, to which a song of any kind, grand, simple or a song of any kind, grand, simple or time to overlook such things and all otherwise, would be a tallow dip along-side the refulgent sun."

Bether elements world balanced again.

Rather clever in me—what?

Annoyances at the Theatre To the Editor of the Evening Public Leager:

Sir—Allow me a few words to George Parker, please.

It takes all kinds of pests to make this old world go around. To forget our troubles for a few hours we go to see a show, but there is always some old grouch to spoil our evening. I can't understand, either, why such people as you describe don't stay home with their grouch instead of spending good large. I can'd not help but be amused by the article from "English Girl" of their grouch instead of spending good large. their grouch, instead of spending good money on shows, which their shallow minds are unable to digest.

As for the angel child drummer, I have criticized the English, and after the strong it up and raking the strong the stro simply could murder the kid. A thing she is through stirring it up and raking end and are:

"So many mo if you get up and seek a different seat, says she hopes to see the matter are you heart." if you get up and seek a different sent, you know what angel child says. She says: "Too bad about her—or him!" theory that the woman must have the last word. I suppose she will be highly indignant to think that may mere man would dare violate that saved would dare violate that saved

George Parker, you have a fine sense of humor and you must be awfully good-natured. I for one in cases described can hardly hold my temper, for my evenings are spoiled.

How about the ones behind you in the movies reading the titles out loud? I just could twist their necks around,
I, too, lead a dog's life; work every day and seek a little pleasure in a show once in a while, but can't enjoy the evening with such pests around me. I, too, get a pile of fun out of life by making a study of it. Life, it seems to me, is nothing but a big joke.

Ex-Drinker Upholds Prohibition
To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:
Sir—I am an inveterate reader of your People's Forum and find most of the letters intelligible and interesting, but I feel constrained to say that some writers air their ignorance concerning prohibition.
These persons say prohibition was forced on them by a minority. The Eighteenth Amendment was lawfully and legally consummated in the one and only way it could possibly have been done—namely, as provided for in the Constitution of the United States, which provides for submission to the States and for a ratification by a requisite three-fourths of said States. It was passed in the same way that every amendment to the Constitution has ever been passed or could be passed unless the Constitution should be passed to the passed unless the Constitution should be passed to the passed of the passed of the passed of the passed the Constitution should be passed to the passed the Constitution should be pa been passed or could be passed unless the Constitution should be amended to rovide for another way.

Others say it was put over while the "boys were over there." If the boys had been over here they could not have a bonus and, if so, now much! had been over here they could not have voted on it any more than the people at that time here. Except, of course, in the few States such as Ohio, which provides for a popular referendum on constitutional amendments. But that is a State law.

The State of Pennsylvania gave its soldiers a bonus and, if so, how much?

ARCH NTRKET CHURCH, 18th and Arch. At 10:45 Dr. Macartney will preach on the subject. "If Christ Had Not Risen." He will discuss the place of the Resurrection as the great evidential fact of the Christian revelation and how by the Resurration Christ was declared to be the Sec of God with power. If the first Christians had not possessed more lath than a great many of the Christians of today, was would have been the fate of the Church? At 8 Dr. Macartney will preach on "With Thou Show Wonders to the Dead?" Our fathers had a faith in life to come that influenced their lives here, moving them to deny themselves many of the pleasures the to come. But now that faith has faided immeasurably. Is there a connection between the subsidence of this great have and the moral decline that is apparent in every area of life? A special invitation to all the heart-weary and soul-hungry was wish to think for an hour of the weares God hath shown to their beloved dead. Easter Music by the Choir.
