Dick Kerr Is Out of Organized Baseball

AST year Big Jim Vaughn had a battle with Manager Johnny Evers, quit the Cubs and signed with an independent team in Wisconsin. After pitching one game he tried to come back into the organized fold and found the doors ied. He was sentenced to five years in exile, which virtually ends his career in baseball

This year Dick Kerr, the little southpaw on the White Sox, had an arguat with Charley Comiskey over his salary. Comiskey refused to come through Kerr signed with an independent team. He is with that team now, pitchwhen necessary, and is said to have signed for $17,500 for three years. The passing of Kerr will be regretted in baseball circles. It was he who tood out in the 1919 World Series with the Reds, when he pitched his head and won his games despite the efforts of the pillow-lifters to throw him hown. He was one of the "square guys" and his reward was banishment to the independent ranks.

Perhaps his salary demands were a trifle stiff, but it will cost ten times as such in real money to get a man of his caliber to replace him. . . .
