

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES
The Bear on Ice
By DADDE

CHAPTER I
The Cave in the Glen
Jack and Janet were fishing. They sat on the banks of a creek in the great woods behind the house. They were fishing for trout. Their lines were cast into the water and they were waiting for a bite. When their lines had stretched to full length, they drew them from the water and cast them far upstream again. But the fishes were not biting. Perhaps they were having a party in some other part of the creek. Perhaps they were napping in a quiet pool. At any rate, none seemed tempted by the fat worms with which Jack had baited his hook and Janet's.

Fishing and not catching anything grows rather dull after a time. So it is not strange that Janet began to talk. "Put it on ice," suggested Janet. "That is what the market man does," she added.

"Eh! Eh! Eh! Put it on ice! That makes me laugh!" Thus chuckled a squeaky voice behind the children. They whirled around and there was Perky Squirrel grinning at them around the trunk of a tree.

"Why does it make you laugh?" demanded Janet indignantly. She didn't think she had said anything funny. "Haven't you ever heard of fish being put on ice?"

"Have you ever heard of a bear being put on ice?" suggested Perky Squirrel, answering with another question—one that sounded rather silly to Janet.

"No, indeed!" flared Janet. "Whoever heard of a bear being put on ice?"

"I have," giggled Perky Squirrel. "And that is why I am laughing. The joke is on the bear."

"What bear?" asked Jack.

"I don't know what his old name was, but I guess his name now is Cold Nose," giggled Perky Squirrel. "He is on ice in a den in this very valley. Come with me and I will show you."

Jack and Janet forgot the hopping fish and ran eagerly after Perky Squirrel as he frisked from tree to tree.

Perky Squirrel led them to a place where the creek roared through a deep, rocky glen. Although the day was warm, the air here was very cool. The children thought at first this was due to the fact that the sun didn't shine into the glen. They soon found that the real cause was a cave of ice in the side of the glen.

"I see the ice," whispered Janet.

"But where is the bear?"

"Eh! Eh! Eh!" laughed Perky Squirrel. "The bear is sleeping in the den. It is so cold there, he hasn't awakened from his winter sleep. He doesn't know summer is here. Unless some one stirs him up he will snooze until fall, and miss the pleasant warm months altogether. Isn't that a joke on him?"

(Jack and Janet don't think it is much of a joke on Cold Nose Bear, particularly when they learn that if he doesn't wake up he is liable to starve to death in his sleep. How he got on ice and how they got him off will be told tomorrow.)

Two Minutes of Optimism
By HERMAN J. STICH

Sidetracked
A magnificent train of cars was puffing its way up a grade. The engine barked and growled as it ground, roared, crawled, dragged its way up, seemingly restrained by some invisible, impalpable hand. The ground rose like a wall. The wheels tore fire from the rails. Whistles shrieked. Exhausts screamed. Steam and flame blackened the air.

A train whistled and engaged seemed to be struggling with an angry, angry of fury, draining himself of his last vestige of power and vitality in a futile effort to make headway.

After a while the driving wheels slipped. The others whirled round and round helplessly. The cars were stopped and still.

A slow freight was waiting behind, so the engineer let his train down the hill, and there it was sidetracked while the slow freight behind passed it by.

"What's the matter?" a passenger asked the engineer. "Why couldn't you make it go up that hill?"

"Not enough sand," he answered shortly. "You can't make a steep hill without plenty of sand."

"Many men are very much like that train."

They have the ability, the energy, the opportunity—but their sand-box is only half filled.

When they get to a steep hill they make a single furious effort for a time, then their driving wheels slip and they don't make their destination—they can't "get over."

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 111—Hypnotizing an Apple
An apple, strung on a cord, slides freely down the string held vertically. When commanded, the apple will stop suddenly at any point on the string. The secret lies in the method of piercing the apple, which is previously prepared. The hole does not go straight through, but at an angle, as shown in the diagram. By rolling two small bits of cardboard into tubes and inserting them in the passages, the cord will be kept in more securely in its course.

Each end of the string is held with a hand at any point, simply pull the end of the cord (but, and the tightened string will do the trick. By relaxing pressure, the apple will resume its slide.

WANAMAKER'S April 24, 1923 WANAMAKER'S

Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store

NOTICE! YOUNG MEN!
78 All-Wool Suits, $15
$15 for an all-wool suit—for a Wanamaker suit! You're right, they won't be here long at that price. We doubt if we could buy an all-wool suit for as little in the wholesale market.

Single-breasted two-button suits of mixed chevots, mostly with half-lined coats, though some are full lined. Just a few of a kind, so out they go at only $15.

Here is the exact quantity in each size, so you will know just what to expect:

Size	34	35	36	37	38	39	40	42
Quantity	7	7	9	11	12	12	16	4

(Gallery, Market)

Men's Oxfords—Special, $5
Two styles—and both are sketched. No sketch can show the quality of the leather, which is obvious enough for any man to appreciate. It is thick, yet soft and pliable, all of which makes for durability and lasting appearance. It's the type of leather that takes well to shines—and men like that.

Both kinds have welted soles, outlined with white stitching, and a well-known brand of rubber heels.

One is of light tan leather with brass eyelets, perforations and stitching.

The other is of ruddy brown leather, conservative of finish.

Seldom do oxfords like these are within the reach of a five-dollar bill!

Tweed Suits Special, $10—$15
The suit seems an indispensable part of a woman's wardrobe this Spring, and nine out of ten women are choosing tweed. These low prices will be a special inducement to choose them.

At $10—rose, Copenhagen, tan or violet tweed. The tailored coat of mannish cut is unlined; the skirt is trim. Sizes 14 to 38.

At $15—herringbone tweed in sage green, two-tone colorings of Copenhagen—and-brown and homespun mixtures comprise the second group. Coats are lined with plain or fancy silks; skirts are nicely belted and pocketed.

Great Variety, $18 to $25
Other tweed suits in hyacinth blue, Copenhagen, rose, tan, brown, etc., are among these pretty things. All of the jackets are silk lined.

Some Astonishing Values in This Clearaway Sale of Dresses
It's always great fun to choose a frock in a sale like this, because there are so many pleasant surprises. Just one or two frocks of a kind, so there is a thrilling possibility of finding the very dress one wants at a much lower price than one would ever dream of.

Some of the collars need pressing, but the low prices more than compensate for that.

Silk Frocks, $10 and $15
Taffeta, crepe de chine and sponge dresses—even a few beaded canton crepes—make up this group. Mostly navy blue and in the smaller sizes.

Cloth Frocks, $7.50 to $20
Navy blue Poiret twill and tricotine frocks, headed or embroidered. Poiret twill cape frocks with bodices of Canton crepe. Tweed frocks, some with cape to match.

Fine Choice of Women's Sports Coats, Capes and Wraps at Lowered Prices
Tweed coats, polo coats and dress coats in several special groups, among which are a number of sample garments. The big fact about this stock is that quality is high while prices are low.

$15, $18.75 to $27.50
for a group of capes and wraps, all beautifully silk lined, some embroidered, button-trimmed or braided; many are in the dolman effects. Principally of velour and Bolivia.

Also unlimited choice of sport coats and capes of tweeds and herringbones unlined or fully lined with silk.

(Market)

Irish Linen Table Damask, $2
Real linen and really from Ireland—good, old-fashioned quality that means satisfaction and long wear. It comes in a cream bleach, 68 inches wide.

Tablecloths at $4.50
Fully bleached Irish linen tablecloths, in several patterns, are 70 inches square.

Napkins of pure linen, in a good assortment of pretty designs, are 19 inches square at $5 a dozen.

(Central)

Nightgowns and Envelope Chemises in Pretty Colors at $1.50
A tailored chemise with French knots can be had in orchid, flesh or white nainsook. A lacy one is in white or flesh.

Nightgowns with round or surplice necks are in rose, orchid, flesh-pink or white nainsook.

Colored Bed Sets Entirely New
We gave the idea to a manufacturer who carried it out for us most successfully in these pretty sets. A bedspread, a bolster throw and a bureau scarf match in an airy, lacy pattern in white on a blue or rose ground. They're all Summer weight, too.

The bedspread measures 81x90 inches and has cut corners and scalloped edges. This, with the bolster throw, is $7.50.

Bureau scarfs are 18x54 inches at 75c.

Pretty Little Frocks for Small Girls—$1.10
(Sizes 2 to 6 Years)

Isn't the little frock sketched cunning? It is of good quality gingham trimmed with checks—in cadet blue with red-checked gingham, yellow with brown, green with green or pink with pink. The round neck is a becoming one for wee girls and the sash in back is sure to be a source of delight.

Another style at $1.10 is of checked gingham with blue, pink or lavender grounds. The collar, cuffs and belt are of white pique.

3 Specials in 9x12 Feet Rugs
Pretty nearly every other household is looking for at least one new 9x12 rug, for that is the most-wanted room size. Here are three totally different kinds—taking care of all the rooms in the house and the inclosed porch.

Reversible Fiber Rugs at $7.75
These sanitary rugs in woven patterns help clean themselves when reversed every so often.

Hit-or-Miss Rag Rugs at $8.50
Good old Colonial rag rugs in cheery, homelike colors, all mixed, hit or miss, as they come.

Axminster Rugs at $27.50
Pleasing Oriental patterns in artistic colorings are here in rugs of a good standard grade.
