"Desn't he get hungry?" asked Jack. "To be sure he does," giggled Perky Squirrel. "He has used up all the extra fat he had when he went into the cave. He is now as thin as the tail of a rat. Every once in a while his stomach tells him to wake up. But when he yawns and opens his eyes he finds the air chilly and the cave fil ed with ice. He thinks it is still January and goes right back to sleep. My, but he will be mad when he finds he haw been tricked and it is June."

"Supposing he doesn't wake up." said Janet soberly. "Supposing he starves to death waiting for summer."

"Ek! I hadn't thought of that."
