Peanut Butter Is Used for a Delicious Salad, for Various Cakes and for Sandwiches

By MRS. M. A. WILSON

THE first real warm days of the season often cause the family to feel that the old standbys are just a little passé and that some dishes with a real zest should be added to the menu for variety's sake. This is a particularly good time for the housewife to bring into play menus that feature the unusual dish, and to increase the vegetable portion of the menu.

Italian Waffles

Place in mixing bowl
One-half cup of powdered sugar,
Yolks of four eggs,
Two tablespoons of butter,
Cream until light and fluffy.
Now add
Two cups of flour,
Two teaspoons of baking powder,
One-half teaspoon of salt,
One and one-half cups of milk.
Beat well to blend, and then put and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the four eggs, and then bake in well-greased waffle irons; serve with jam and a tomato salad with the waffles for a tasty supper.

Fresh eggs are abundant and the housewife can serve a fondue for the evening meal. The fondue is a quite ancient French dish which was extremely popular in countries ago and is still served in those little Bohemian cafes that abound in the student or Latin Quarter, as it is called in Paris. To have the fondue at its best and to insure its being really good, it should be cooked in a chafing dish at the table. To prepare a fondue for a family of five persons break five eggs in bowl and beat well. Now place in the chafing dish two medium size onions, chopped fine,
Cook onions slowly, taking care that the onions do not brown. Now add
Two tablespoons of finely chopped parsley,
Six ounces of grated cheese.
Stir, and just as soon as the cheese melts add the well-beaten eggs. Stir well and season with
One-half teaspoon of salt,
Two teaspoons of paprika.
Cook four minutes and serve on toast. Sprinkle with paprika.

A Cheese and Onion Pudding

Chop very fine six medium-size onions and par boil. Drain. Now place in saucepan
Two cups of milk,
One-quarter cup of flour.
Stir to dissolve the milk and then bring to a boil. Cook slowly for ten minutes. Now add
One teaspoon of salt,
One-half teaspoon of mustard,
Three-quarters teaspoon of paprika,
One cup of grated cheese,
Four tablespoons of finely chopped parsley,
The prepared onions,
Two well-beaten eggs,
Four tablespoons of melted butter.
Beat hard for three minutes to blend, then turn in well-greased and floured baking dish and bake in oven for five minutes in slow oven. Serve as the protein dish, with an all-vegetable dinner.

Poached Eggs, Oriental

Cut slices of bread one inch thick and toast lightly. Now prepare three pounds of spinach and cook. Drain well, chop fine and rub the spinach through the strainer, draining free all liquid. Now add to the liquid drained from the spinach sufficient milk to measure one and one-half cups, and place in a saucepan, and add
Four tablespoons of flour,
Stir to dissolve the flour, and bring to a boil. Cook for ten minutes slowly. Now add the prepared spinach, turn over and lay a poached egg for each service on top. Peanut butter will supply a most delicious flavor, not only as a spread for bread and crackers in making sandwiches, but also for other novel and attractive dishes.

Cream Cheese and Peanut Butter Salad

Blend one-half cup of cream cheese,
One green pepper chopped fine,
Two bunches of parsley chopped fine,
One small onion chopped fine,
Three tablespoons of peanut butter.
Fill in the grove of crisp celery and then cut the celery in inch pieces. Turn in crisp nest of lettuce and serve with French dressing. Peanut butter makes an unusually delicious filling for cakes as well as icing.

Peanut Butter Cake

Place in mixing bowl
One and one-quarter cups of sugar,
One-quarter cup of shortening,
One-quarter cup of peanut butter,
Cream well and then add
Three cups of flour,
Four teaspoons of baking powder,
One-half teaspoon of nutmeg,
One cup of milk.
Beat hard, then beat in
Two well-beaten eggs,
and turn in two well-greased and floured deep layer cake pans, and bake in hot oven for twenty-five minutes. When cool spread with peanut butter and then cover with icing made as follows:
Peanut Butter Icing
Place in small bowl
One-quarter cup of water,
Three tablespoons of peanut butter,
Beat well to mix and then work in sufficient sugar to make an icing that will spread, and use to ice the cake.

Peanut Butter Fudge

This is delicious, and the older folks will enjoy it just as much as the youngsters.
One cup of milk,
One cup of syrup,
One-half cup of peanut butter,
Stir to dissolve the sugar and peanut butter and then cook until the mixture will form a firm ball when tried in cold water. This is 25¢ on the candy thermometer. Now add
One cup of marshmallow shrap,
Whip and beat to blend. Pour in well-oiled pan, having the mixture about one inch deep. Let cool and then cut in squares.

One can't keep fringe from the mode any more than one could keep it from a mid-Victorian parlor. This spring many people had its obligatory all written, yet lo! from its couch of illness rose the hardy accessory. Its vitality is evinced by a report from the Anteuil races, which determine so largely what women all over the globe are going to wear. This report has to do with a frock, the skirt of which was composed entirely of looped fringe of the material. The fact of it is you don't need to apologize to a soul if you choose to trim your dress with fringe instead of something else. Here we show a stunning little dress of brown perline with finish of royal blue woolen fringe. The girle achieves distinction by its novel direction and by a buckle of royal blue composition. And, by the way, perline, particularly in the new fancy border effects, vies with kasha for the favor of the fashionable New Yorker when she comes to select the popular one-sided coat dresses and coats.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

Mr. Bear's New Job
By DADDY

This week Jack and Janet learn what Cold Nose, the bear, who is caught on the hook of the freckled-faced boy's fishing line.

CHAPTER I

The Birds Tell the News

"I WONDER what has become of Cold Nose, the bear, who was caught on the hook of the freckled-faced boy's fishing line," said Jack to Janet one day as they lay on the top of a hill in the great woods, resting from their play.
"Perhaps the hook came out of the bear's ear and he gobbled up the freckled-faced boy," replied Janet.
"You know the bear was very hungry after his extra-long winter's sleep," suggested Jack, looking up among the tree branches for the busy friend, Perky Squirrel who was not in sight, nor could they hear his jolly chuckle. As they were rather tired, they made up their minds not to wait until Perky Squirrel came along. Then they could ask him what had become of the bear and the freckled-faced boy.
As they waited, Jack and Janet closed their eyes so they could rest better. After a time they became aware of voices chattering above their heads.
"Hear that, hear that! Have you heard the awful news?" one voice was saying.
"No, Mr. Cocky Robin," replied the other voice. "What is the awful news?"
"Cold Nose, the bear, has lost his freedom," cried Cocky Robin.
"He is shut up behind prison bars," added Brown Thrush.
"Rappity-rap-rap-rap! You couldn't shut me up," boasted Reddy Woodpecker, who was putting a hole in a hollow tree. "With my strong beak I'll soon peck my way out."
"Supposing you had a chain around your neck?" said Bob-o-link.
"And supposing you were under the spell of a clever magician?" shrieked Purple Swallow from above.
"And supposing that magician held you as a slave and made you do all sorts of queer things?" screamed Policeman Blue Jay.
"Goodness me, is that what has happened to Cold Nose, the bear," asked Janet, sitting up straight.
"Yes, that is what has happened to Cold Nose, the bear," chorused all the birds. "Could anything worse happen to one of the free folks of the forest?"
Jack and Janet were sorry for Cold Nose, the bear. At the same time they thought he was largely to blame for his own trouble.
"That is what he gets for being a bad bear and wanting to eat Janet and me and the freckled-faced boy," said Jack.
"How about the worms, don't they call themselves 'us'?" Cocky Robin persisted. "And yet I eat them, and don't feel bad."
This argument sounded reasonable to Jack, but he didn't have time to think about it, for just then Perky Squirrel scurried up in a great hurry.
"Eek! Eek! Here you are!" he barked at Jack and Janet. "I have been looking for you everywhere. You helped get Cold Nose, the bear, into trouble, and now you have to help get him out from under the spell of the clever magician, loose him from his iron chain, and free him from his prison. Eek! Eek! Hurry up!"
Jack and Janet ran after Perky Squirrel as he frisked away and the birds all followed overhead. The children ran up hill and down until they came to a clearing at the edge of the woods.
There they saw a house and barn and yard. In the yard was a large cage made of heavy posts and wire fencing. In this cage was Cold Nose, the bear, and a very queer figure, in a tall, pointed hat. Something was wrong with Cold Nose, the bear. He didn't seem to have any head. A second look showed Jack and Janet that he had a head, all right, but was upside down.
"Oh, Cold Nose, the bear, has been turned topsy-turvy by the cruel, clever magician, shrieked the birds. "Oh, Cold Nose, the bear, will have to walk on his nose."

(Jack and Janet plan to free Cold Nose, the bear, but get a surprise, as will be told tomorrow.)

Two Minutes of Optimism

Pork Packer Thoroughness

Recently we spent some time "sight-seeing" in some of the greatest industrial establishments in the world—the meat-packing houses in Chicago and elsewhere. If there is one thing that such a little voyage through what ought to be dubbed "Efficiency Land" impresses upon the mind, it is the value of doing a job completely—and, therefore, doing it well.

The meat-packing organizations are monuments to the efficacy of thoroughness.

Once friend pig lands in one of these plants, it is all over but the squeal—all over in the sense that from his rooting little snout to his tiny wiggling tail, from the tips of his toes to the top of his back, his every inch is converted into cash—helps tickle men's palates as well as feed their bank accounts.

Not a bit of him escapes or goes to waste. His hide is transformed into leather, his gastric juices into soap and other medicines, his feet into table delicacies, his toe nails and carcass into fertilizer, his grease into lard and other fats for frying, his meat into bacon, ham and sausage, and he becomes a delicious and profitable victim of pork packer thoroughness.

It is this thoroughness that is the difference between the neat men and most of us—when the packers start something they do it completely—while nine men out of ten, after they start, is the finish that counts. And what people want to know is not so much how things start off as how they pan out.

This knack of doing a job in first-class shape, of "doing things right," has become a lost art to such an extent that the man who really does things "clean as whistles" gets the universal glad-hand, an opportunity and a bonus, and is simply not let go for anything.

Every one of us can take a tip from the pork packer brand of thoroughness and make it the foundation upon which we are building.
