Big Stockholder in Glenwood Industrial Alcohol Company

UP, MANAGER SAYS

Tendler, claimant of the light-ship championship of the world, and Phil Glasman, are the stockholders in the Glenwood Industrial Alcohol Company. It is learned following the seizure of the plant at Yoga and Cedar streets last Monday by prohibition authorities in this city.

In the case in the hands of the Federal Prohibition Commission in Washington, who will today hand over to the Internal Revenue Department for Federal action, the seizure of a truckload of thirty-six cases of alcohol as it was leaving the plant without what the agents said were proper markings.

The officers of the company will also be called for a hearing by State Prohibition Director Davis to show cause why they should be permitted to manufacture alcohol without a license. This action will be brought irrespective of charges that may be made against the company by the Collector of Internal Revenue.

The seized alcohol is said to be worth $25,000, and since its seizure the plant has been under guard of prohibition authorities. The distillery was located on a street near Fifty-fourth and Union State Avenue, and served upon Edward I. Hallin, general manager of Parish street near Broad.

Director Davis regards the seizure as one of the most important blows he has dealt the illicit alcohol industry in Philadelphia.

George M. Swartz, Diamond street near Thirty-first, and Max Feldbaum, Locust street near Fifty-fourth, named in an affidavit by Joseph Elkin, driver of the truck, are said to be members of the firm. According to Elkin, the two men assisted in loading the alcohol in the truck and directed him to go to Fifth and Diamond streets, where he would meet a man and then proceed to Chester.

Elkin said he was given no transportation permit, and Director Davis said today that he had not confirmed any Philadelphia permit from the company's plant. When the truck left the plant it is said to have been led by a touring car. When Agent Connors tried to stop the car he said it sped by him at the rate of forty miles an hour. Both agents got the license number, however, and the owner is reported to be a prominent politician of this city whose name is being withheld.

Glasman admits that he and Tendler are stockholders, but declares that he invested the fighter's money without the latter's knowledge.

"I was pulled into this company through friends and invested heavily," Glasman said. "I spent plenty and so far neither Tendler nor myself have received a penny on the investment."

"I tried to get out of the company resigning as an officer. This didn't work and I still hold a large share."

Neither Tendler nor myself have ever been at the plant. The fighter did not know I was investing his money in stock in the company, nor did he know there was going on at the plant. It is all a mistake and at the hearing the public will learn that it was a 'frame-up'."

JUDGE J. T. WOODRING DIES: OLYMPIC ATHLETE HIS SON

Father Succumbs Day After Youth Wins Penn Relay

Northampton, Pa., May 1.—(By A. P.) Judge James T. Woodring, of the Northampton County Court, and father of Allen T. Woodring, the Syracuse University athlete of Olympic fame, died last night of diabetes. He was sixty-one years old, and was elected to the bench last November.

Allen Woodring led his team to victory Saturday in the one-mile college championship relay race at the University of Pennsylvania, carried off after a thrilling struggle with Stevenson, running anchor for Princeton.

Woodring did the quarter in 57.45 seconds around two turns, only 4.50th of a second less than the world's record made by Maxey Long on a straightaway track.

Judge Woodring was elected to the bench November last as the third judge, receiving a majority of approximately 1000 over his Republican opponent. He was born in the Nauvoo township, Northampton County, August 4, 1860.

TOWN CLERK KIDNAPPED

Missing Due to His Halting Federal He Says

Scranton, N. Y., May 1.—(By A. P.) Edgar Searle, clerk of the town of Scranton, was kidnapped early Sunday morning into an automobile by a three-man party, and taken along a country road where he was severely beaten and held for three miles from home.

The attack is said to result from funds procured in the village when Searle was a funeral last Tuesday.

Searle, in a statement to county authorities, said he placed the funeral of Francis M. Henderson at the graves of the Hilldale Cemetery, of which he also was in charge, because arrangements had been made with him as town clerk, and he was to be present.

Thought Night Watchman Was Bent on Wrongdoing

Waukegan, Ill., May 1.—(By A. P.) James P. Sargent, night watchman in a lumber yard, was killed by two policemen who were on a hunt for a burglar yesterday during a hunt for a burglar.

Policemen had been notified that a burglar had been seen in the lumber yard. They were investigating when they encountered a man in a dark coat and hat. The police replied and shot him.

The man was identified as James P. Sargent, night watchman in a lumber yard. He was killed by two policemen who were on a hunt for a burglar.

CLUE TO LOST SON

Yearling U. S. in Old Auto, Says He is in Texas

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—(By A. P.) A clue to the whereabouts of a missing son of a man who was given to Mrs. S. J. Baker, fifty-two, who left in an old Ford automobile weeks ago in search of her son, arrived in this city yesterday. The man was informed by a man her son had found on a ranch near San Antonio, and immediately the man's letters to the address given were forwarded to her.
