Concerts Are Held in Schools, Clubs, Theatres, Hotels and Homes

POOR RICHARDS HONORED

Musical treats for the entire city were provided in today's program of Music Week, with concerts scheduled at schools, in hotels, stores, schools, theatres, homes, hospitals—everywhere.

A fine program in a setting that magnified the music's lifting qualities was heard last night by members of the Poor Richard Club, who had a dinner and a Music Week concert on the main floor of the Curtis Publishing Company Building.

John F. Ryan, president of the Philadelphia Music League, urged the members to become familiar with the music. "Our task now," he said, "is to get men to realize how wonderful it is. The women realize it, but the men do not."

More than 1000 parents and friends of students crowded the Germantown High School last night to hear a musical which had been prepared by pupils and alumni as the triumph of the school's celebration of Music Week.

The Music Week program for today is as follows: 12—1—Band concert in Broad Street by Girard College Band.

FRANCIS J. McGOVERN LEFT $75,000 TO CHARITY

Probate of Will Shows Estate Value as $148,800
Catholic institutions benefit to the extent of $75,000 by the will of Francis J. McGovern, who died at his home, 702 West Lehigh avenue, April 18. The will, which was admitted to probate yesterday, disposes of real and personal property to the amount of $148,800.

Joseph McKernan, a cousin, is left $10,000 in trust and at his death $5000 will go to the Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, $2500 to St. John's Orphanage, and an equal sum to St. Joseph's House for Homeless and Industrious Boys.

Other bequests made were as follows: Catholic Union of America, of Washington, $3000; Church of St. John of Arc, $1000; Sisters of Mercy for the establishment of a free bed in the Mercordia Hospital, $5000; Epiphany Apostolic College of Baltimore, $5000; Catholic Foreign Missionary Society, $5000; Catholic College of Armagh, Ireland, $5000; St. Michael's Church of Bloomsburg, $1000; Catholic Church Extension Society for the erection of chapels in Southern and Western States, $5000; Catholic Church Extension Society for distribution to destitute priests, $1000; to Cardinal Logue, Archbishop of Armagh, for the building of a priests' house at Lough Macry, Ireland, $2500.

St. John's Orphan Asylum, $3000; Catholic Home for Friendless Children, $3000; St. Vincent's Home, $3000; and $3000 each for the following institutions: Society for the Propagation of the Faith, St. Vincent's Home and Maternity Hospital, Archbishop Ryan Memorial Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and St. Edmund's Hospital for Crippled Children; Poor Children's out-fund general conference of St. Vincent de Paul, $2000; three homes of the Little Sisters of the Poor of this city, $2000 each, and $1000 each to the following institutions: House of Good Shepherd, St. Joseph's Protectorate for Girls, Norrisstown; Catholic Board of Missions for work among the colored people, St. Mary Magdalen Asylum for Colored Girls. Five hundred dollars each to the following: St. Christopher's Hospital for Children, Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania and the Altar Society of St. Edward's Catholic Church.

After a number of private bequests have been made to relatives the residue of the estate has been left to Cardinal Dougherty for such use among the poor and needy as he may see fit.

Other wills admitted to probate were those of Albin C. Butler, who died at 1506 North Boulevard street, $15,000; and Harry E. De Haven, of 2225 Memphis street, who left $9000. An inventory of the personal estate of Richard C. Warner was also filed. It totaled $241,223.39.

BUNDLE-DAY PLEAS SOFTENING HEARTS

Charitable Philadelphia Makes Response to Requests to Aid Needy in Near East

COLLECTIONS ARE STARTED

Charitable Philadelphia today is answering the plea made on behalf of thousands of needy Armenians for cast-off clothing.

These gifts, being collected on "Bundle Day" will mean little individually to the givers, it is declared, but each gift, no matter how small will mean warmth and perhaps life for some one in the Near East.

Few will fail to remember that this is "Bundle Day" when housewives and others are asked to donate to the Armenians only whatever clothing is on hand and not absolutely needed. Some 1,000,000 of these people who in a race against slaughter by Turkish bayonets have fled to the sterile fastnesses on and around Mount Ararat are in danger of death from cold, unless relief is provided in the form of clothing or October when, in that region, winter begins.

Brings Story of Misery
A recently returned relief worker tells of having found in one snow-filled mountain gully some 30,000 men, women and children who had among them somewhat less than 20,000 yards of American flour sack. Many were altogether naked.

In the face of such need few Armenians would be likely to quibble over the design or complexion of the garments that were gathered up. Hardly any of them would understand more symbolism in such garments than a measure of protection against winds and snow, equally as cruel as Turkish swords, and the generosity of the American race.

Some eighteen months ago there was a first "bundle day" in the schools and colleges of the city. Among the things that were gathered were well-darned varsity sweaters, once more or less portable markers of the University of Pennsylvania; woolen-striped cricker blazers from Haverford College, discarded uniforms of suburban volunteer fire departments and warm raincoats used to wrap diving Venuses after their performances.

Anything Is Acceptable
None of these things seemed to the Armenians too bizarre. Last month a good many leagues inland from Batoum a traveler came upon an Armenian lady of high degree, proudly and gratefully in possession of the cherry-colored and low-tail of a minaret-interior, and held in place by a girder marked "Firemen and police brand suspenders."

He discovered also an ancient and bearded priest wearing a pleated sea frock, a velvet tam o' shanter and shoes designed to cure fallen arches and to prevent slipping on wet pavements.

Nothing, the commission is at pains to point out, will be refused on the ground of conventionality. The more conventional the better. Nothing will do so well as a fur-lined overcoat, with or without a collar, or a fleece-lined trench coat. It is true, however, that chignons, lace, cigarette waists and costumes for classical dancers are of relatively small value.

Let that guide you.
About 1000 delivery trucks belonging to the leading department stores will collect the bundles about midnight and take them to the Merchants' Warehouse, at the foot of Federal street.

Final Appeal Is Made
They will be set into bales and shortly loaded on a relief ship bound for Batoum. It is expected to carry the distribution of them to the farthest mountain limits before the end of September.
