The sople must not only pay the taxes on aports which go directly into the ressury, but they must pay the resilting increase in prices of all the things they buy and consume.

"Brondly speaking, the views of the people interests who asked these taxes and got them and of the people who pay them differ widely in their praisement of this measure and its effect upon the national prosperity.

"So far as the special interests are enterned, it goes without saying, the times imposed are both satisfactory and comforting.

"On the other hand, the people view this bill as a measure full of mischief and dangerous possibilities, loaded with maumerable burdens for them and their prosperity. the report says, "just as those in

"When the Fordney bill passed the House the general public regarded it as a monstrosity so grotesque and absurd that they took it more as a joke than as a serious attempt at tariff revision. It did not excite in them any great degree of alarm because they felt sure the Senate would rewrite it and they expected from this body saner action in their behalf.

"In these expectations the people have been grievously disappointed."

t disappointment has grown as they lied the bill, first into surprise and studied the bill, first into surprise and then indignation at the audacity of the assault upon their pocketbooks and is fasily culminating into a grim determination to resist to the utmost this attempted spollation."

The measure is an act, he said, to mortgage the country and its resources to the protected and monopolized industries.

In his report, Senator Simmons declares the bill protects and maintains present high profits and makes the people pay increased profits plus a tax for the benefit of the profiteer.

The report attacks the flexible tariff, mying that the power to further increase the rates vested in the President will operate as an invitation to invoke the exercise of these powers for the exercise of these powers for the they wish to raise prices. Senator Simmons says the statement in the majority report that the pur-pose of the bill is to permit American industry to pay wages sufficient to enable American workingmen to main-tain the American standard of living tain the American standard of living "sounds rather strange, in view of the fact that these self-same industries are today engaged in an intensive drive to reduce present wage standards."

Referring to the argument that, unless the bill is passed, American markets will be seriously invaded by foreign producers, the report says American goods are sold in foreign markets in competition with the world and that if American producers can compete in those markets with foreign manufacturers they should be able to compete in the American market.

After leaving Merrie England, the Doo Dads proceeded to Holland. In doing so, they crossed the North Sea, which has so recently been the scene of such mighty sea fights. There were still some sunken mines to be avoided, but their good ship got safely across and landed the Doo Dads at their destination. Here they received a great welcome.

Old Doc Sawbones, who has his spy-glass along, can see a great stretch of countryside from the windmill tower. The big flapping windmill is the chief attraction for most of the little Doo Dads just now. The young rascals are swarming all over it, and are using it as a Ferris wheel. Flannel Feet, the Cop, was calling to them to come down off the windmill before they broke their young necks, but while he was doing so one little mischief tied a loop of rope to his belt and slipped the other end onto an arm of the windmill. Up went the Cop, but not before he grabbed his tormentor by the ears and took him along. In the excitement Percy Haw Haw, the Dude, had been Those funny looking birds that you see are storks. The water you see is one of the canals for which Holland is famous. The big canal barge is being hauled up by a nag. The Dutch have planned to take the Doo Dads on a picnic excursion down the canal. The old lady has the refreshments all ready and stowed away, in the barge are a lot of fine, big juicy ples like the one she holds in her hand. Some of the rude little Doo Dads are poking fun at the funny hats and patched trousers. They don't like this a bit, as you can tell by the way they are scowling at their little tormentors.
