The French Paintings of "Jeanes"

are attracting much attention in the Picture Store. They are decidedly original in method, and so rich in color that each suggests a great glowing jewel.

The subjects are Venetian, French, and mountain scenes in the Dolomites.

Each is distinctive and different. "My life will not be sufficient for me to paint all that I have conceived," says Jeanes, "so why lose time to say twice what I have said the best I could."

For a few days yet the pictures will be exhibited. All are for sale.

Men Do Not Always Remember That They Are Often Judged

by the company they keep.

The world looks upon the friends we associate with and registers us accordingly.

It is therefore important for us to choose proper friends and to be cautious about losing them for any fault of our own.

A profession of friendship is a very serious engagement.
