4500 Men's Shirts of English Broadcloth

at $2.95

They are $4.50 to $6 Everywhere

Thirty-six hundred are white. Nine hundred are tan.

Genuine English broadcloth (there are several more or less close imitations) is a fabric of long-staple cotton that, when finished, looks like silk.

Wears many times as long.

Today, favored above silk.

These shirts are made "worthy of the fabric"—shaped for comfort over hips—an emergency sale, and the price squeezed at that—because the shirts are about an inch shorter than the requirements for our regular stock; yet a good standard length.

Bead-edge neckband, good pearl buttons—five of them; new tight cuffs now like vogue.

$2.95—for $4.50 to $6 shirts, as good stores everywhere should charge. And a less price than any store pays a wholesale.

Sizes 13¼ to 17.

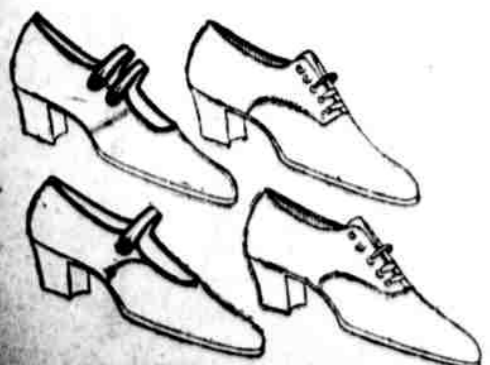

Gimbel's—Ninth Street Side.
