SAYS PHOTO PROVES IT

New York, May 10 .- Championing William Hope, spirit photographer of Crewe, England, and reiterating his beief in the authenticity of the picture of Sir Hiram Maxim, which he has shown at each of his lectures on spirit photography. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in a letter to the Tribune, has replied to the charge made by Hudson Maxim that the picture of his brother is

The photograph of Str Hiram is nown by Sir Arthur as one of the most atteresting of his collection. He has taken pains in his lecture to explain that during his lifetime the inventor and scientist was one of the avowed disbelievers of spiritualism in England. The face of Sir Hiram appears on a plate with Miss Scatcherd, an English medium, as the sitter. It is surrounded with the "psychic hood" common to most of these photographs. The sunken eyes, pronounced nose and short jutting beard are the features of Sir Hiram as he was in the deeh he was in the flesh.

Each time he has shown the picture Sir Arthur has said: "Any one who has known Sir Hiram in his lifetime will find no difficulty in recognizing these strongly marked features as his."

When questioned about the picture, Hudson Maxim described it as "hocus pocus," saying that his brother was the most radical of unbelievers in spiritualism, and that it was highly fronic

"He will, for example, find all these ersonalities ridiculed by us. In Solar time, or what is known as we Revelation, page 124, he will apparent, or astronomical time, is time for great leaders. "Could Mr. Maxim put it stronger than that? But this objection does no: make us blind and deaf to what we actually see and hear. In the case of his brother, the fact that he was a strong materialist was stated in my lecture-and, indeed, was the point of the story, since he had said openly that if he were wrong he would own up in some way. I see that Mr. Maxim does not even attempt to explain how so fine a face of his brother appeared on the plate of a little carpenter at Crewe under the watchful eyes of so an observer as Miss Scatcherd. 'Of course, the term 'hocus-pocus has been applied to every advance of human knowledge—I am old enough to remember it as applied to Darwinismand it is not really helpful. We want a definite alternative explanation, but none has ever been forthcoming save 'fraud,' which is absurd when one takes

Standard and Solar Time Sir-In your publication of May 3, "The People's Forum," under heading of Questions Answered, I find an answer to a query headed, "No Difference of Time." What you have said regarding the difference of time between New York and Philadelphia as applied to Eastern Standard, or seventy-fifth meridian mean time is quite correct, but your solution of the true or solar time

I may say that I am indebted to Mr. Hudson Maxim for his thought-compelling book on poetry. Mr. Maxim's error lies in the fact that he has been repelled by some aspects of spiritualism without knowing the subject sufficiently to be aware that they are equally repellant to all well-informed spiritualists.

Death the Great Revealer the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir-How often do we hear the re-mark that daily life is ordinary and humdrum? One day is much like an-other, we hear said again and again, and small incidents and petty details fill People exchange the time of day and even call upon each other and work together, without ever getting what the Puritans called a "realizing sense" of the deep-down things in character, friendship and human association. But suddenly upon occasion the crust of convention is broken, and people stand before some great crisis. Chasms open, and men and women are called
