Thus ended the two-day search for Margarets. But before I do anything I will take a rest. I am weary of so much talk. Why can't they leave me alone?"

It was revealed to her friends Saturday that she was Winifred Shaughnessy, a niece of Eisie De Wolfe, well known interior decorator in New York. Her mother's first husband was a Salt Lake City man named Shaughnessy. This recalled the fact that she disappeared in 1916 from New York.

She refused to discuss this disappearance when asked about it yesterday. Neither would she say anything about Theodore Kosloff, the Russian dancer, who has since become a film actor in Chiffornia, and with whom she was found as a dancer going by the name of Vern Fredov.
