of the reports turned in by the accountant who has been trying to ferret out the conduct of the affairs of this defunct concern.

Then the Money Flew

However, that loss was only a starter, for during the closing period from May 19, 1921, when Dier reorganized his company taking in Lawrence Sturr and Harry J. Lawrence, who had been his secretary, the money fairly poured out in an effort to keep up appearance.

Look for Further Withdrawals

The accountant also informed the receiver that the auditing force is endeavoring to ascertain if there was any wrongful withdrawal of cash or account from the business, a large part of which, it is believed, to be recoverable; commissions paid to members of the New York Stock Exchange; losses on house accounts; for loss sustained on the transfer of the Charles A. Stoneham account, and losses occasioned by the retirement of Colonel Henry D. Hughes from the firm.

Commissions Ran High

Dier never made a nickel in his dealings. He couldn't the way he worked. If he had simply bucketed his orders he would have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars. But he didn't. For example, when Dier got an order from a customer to buy he would put the order through a commission house. The commission would be $15 a hundred shares for the purchase.

Then the Money Flew

The Victrola is the standard of musical value

When purchasing a sound-reproducing instrument consider these important facts:

- 1 Musical performance is the first consideration—and it is evident that the greatest artists would not make records for the Victrola if it did not present their interpretations true to life itself.
- 2 Nowhere else can you find such a collection of music as contained in the Victor Record Catalog—and the Victrola is the one instrument specially made to play Victor Records.
- 3 The Victrola embodies all the worth-while basic and fundamental improvements of the past quarter-century. There isn't a material nor an idea nor a process that enters into talking-machine construction which has not been put to the test in the Victor experimental and research laboratories.

Victrolas $25 to $1500.
