Sir-President Harding put his ap-peal for the shorter working day for steel mill men on humanitarian grounds. He might also have stressed the economic point of view. It has been sufficiently well deter-mined to be accepted as an estab-lished fact that the efficiency of the worker can not be kept at normal for such long hours as were once uni-versal in the steel industry and which are still in effect to a large degree. Va-rious tests were made during those days of the war when it was so important that labor should be as efficient as was, that labor should be as efficient as was humanly possible. Tests, made prin-cipally in England, determined then that long hours are not all productive hours, and that, if efficiency is to be made the test, the short shift is the more economical. The efficiency of the individual rapidly decreases after eight hours of labor.

The Sanest Financial News From the West

One of the most valuable features of the Business and Financial Section of the Morning PUBLIC LEDGER is the daily news dispatch by C. B. Evans, editor of the Economist, the leading financial paper of the West, and a national authority on finance and industry.

A business man with large interests said recently: "Do you know that all Wall Street is reading the PUBLIC LEDGER?" When asked why, he replied: "To get Evans's news dispatch from Chicago. Bankers say it is the clearest and sanest financial news that ever came out of the Middle West."

Evans tells what western business men are saying and doing, describes conditions throughout the Middle West and summarizes the western attitude on important political, financial and industrial questions.

This review of financial conditions in Chicago and the Central West appears every day in the Morning PUBLIC LEDGER. It is especially valuable to the manufacturer supplying western markets, the investor interested in western securities or to any business man who wishes to keep well informed on national business conditions.

The man who daily reads the BUSINESS SECTION of the Morning PUB-LIC LEDGER can intelligently answer the question, "How's Business?"
