Now for the Bright Summer and the Frilly Things It Calls For

Of course we shall never forget
Lincoln, Grant, McClellan
nor is it possible to easily forget

Sheridan
Sheridan
Meade

No one who passes the big painting of Sheridan on his horse making his almost impossible ride to Winchester, takes his eyes off the picture without a tremendous stir of patriotism.

How good it is to have a Memorial Day that includes the great company of captains, corporals and soldiers who came in their uniforms from both sides of the country to the great re-union of the North and South, men who loved their country even more than they did their States.

It is good to remember today the handshakes of the brave fellows when they met as brothers in the re-union at Gettysburg. Beside our fathers and mothers in the sanctuaries of the Heavenly sites there rest brave men whose names and deeds transcend the granite of tombstones.

Let us keep our minds fresh and our memories clear of the fathers and brothers who gave their lives and for whom our country sets aside a day as memorial to their patriotism, courage and sacrifice.

Let us put a few more flowers in the homes of the widows and orphans of the soldiers who are gone, and let us plant some new gardens for those who remain and smile upon us.

Let the new Governor and the new leaders of the great State of Pennsylvania mark the day with everything that counts for patriotism; and let us make the State of Pennsylvania greater, not only for the men who have gone, but for the men who are living, who have the example of the splendid men whose valor, learning and leadership shall lead us to great endeavor.

Afternoon and Evening Gowns in Lovely Mauves

All the mauve or lavender colors that one associates with gardens, appear to have been gathered together in sheer frocks of silk crepes and chiffon and Georgette—lavender of sweet peas, of orchids, of lilacs, of hosts of delicate wild flowers and of clouds.

Of all the colors that come out of the dye-pot it is perhaps the most refined and the most tranquilizing.

The dresses are for afternoon and evening and there are scarcely two alike. They have the most fascinating sleeves and novel draperies; one model may look dewy with crystal beads and another will show the new full skirts. All the skirts, by the way, are rather long. The broad flower girdles are one feature; and the petal-like edge to the skirt another. But no two of the dresses are alike. Prices are $60 to $125.

Delightful Wraps of Summer Duvetyn

Never were sleeves so novel and interesting!

In one model they are distinctly short and barrel shaped; in another the entire sleeve is covered with a lattice work; in others they are oddly draped. All of the wraps are as desirable for evening as for afternoon. The colors are dark blue, angora brown, burro, caravan gray, gaillardia and black. Prices $110 to $195.

A Few Handsome Dresses the Young Woman Really Needs

For Summer days bring garden parties, dinners and dances galore, when the ordinary little cotton frock is out of place.

For afternoons, there are few things prettier than crisp dotted swisses. A new style in brown, navy or black with a fichu of organdie edged with shell trimming is particularly lovely. It has short sleeves with deep organdie cuffs and a taffeta sash and the price is $23.50.

Another afternoon dress is in a new sort of open-work silk mesh, Cairo red, Copenhagen, navy or white. It is a bloused affair with a soft satin sash and the daintiest of lace collar and cuffs. Price, $35.

For evenings one could hardly do better than choose one of the new lace gowns, radium lace or silk net over silk. They are the essence of simplicity and youthfulness with little trimming; usually flowers made of chiffon or silk being all that is needed. In white, platinum, bronze, beige or black, $48, $58 and $68.

A Piano That Is Eighty-four Years Old

Mere age is nothing to boast of. But years that have accumulated wisdom and sweetness, command our reverence.

In the eighty-four years of its history.

The Schomacker Piano

has steadily improved in quality. Today it stands as one of the five great American pianos.

In all this time it has been intimately associated with the musical life of Philadelphia, the city in which it was first made, and where it has been made ever since.

It is a piano of inimitably rich, sweet tone. Musicians can instantly distinguish its notes from those of any other piano.

There Is Only One Genuine Schomacker Piano

It has imitators of inferior quality. But the only genuine and original old Philadelphia Schomacker piano is sold in the Wanamaker Piano Salons. Its price is commensurate with its superior quality.

Schomacker uprights, $725 and $750. Schomacker small grands, $1150. Schomacker grands, $1250.
