SHOOTS WIFE DOWN, PLUNGES OFF ROOF
Rudolph Krischer, of 1031 Mt. Vernon St., Had Delusion World Laughed at Him

SAID MATE AIDED HILARITY
Suffering under the delusion that his wife was laughing at him, Rudolph Krischer shot and killed her last night in the kitchen of their home, 1031 Mount Vernon street. Then he ran to the roof and jumped to the pavement in an effort to end his life.

Krischer is in a serious condition at Hahnemann Hospital. Three ribs, his collarbone and right ankle were broken. He is expected to recover.
The story of the tragedy was told today by the son, Charles. He said: "For years my father has been under the delusion that people were laughing at him. Often he said the neighbors were making fun of him, and sometimes that we were laughing at him, too. He accused my mother of laughing at him. He said she put others up to laughing. Of course she denied it, but he accused her again and again. After there were quarrels and loud words. Once my father said: 'A bullet will end your life if this doesn't stop.' Of course we never took that seriously.
"Last night Frank and I were sitting in the front room. My father and mother were in the room in back. We heard them there but there was no quarrel, no loud words. Suddenly, absolutely without warning, came a shot and then a scream. Before we could get there we heard two more shots, and as we entered the room we saw mother fall to the floor.
"Out in the yard I grabbed the pistol and shot my father. But once he got on the roof I could do nothing. I could only watch him as he loosened his hold and fell. How he escaped being killed, I don't understand.
"I'm sure he wasn't in his right mind. No man who was sane would do what he did."
Krischer, at one time a prosperous harness manufacturer, is fifty-seven years old. Lately he has been employed by a leather firm at Sixth and Arch streets.

PHILA. TO FLASH PRICES TO NEW JERSEY FARMERS

Summer Service Will Aid Equal Distribution of Produce
Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger
Trenton, N. J., June 7.—Radio stations in Newark and Philadelphia will flash to New Jersey farmers daily information during the summer on market conditions in the various cities in which their crops are being sold.
In his own farmhouse the grower will be able to clamp the receivers over his ears in the afternoon and listen to a voice tell him over the ether waves the prices that his products brought that morning, or are likely to bring next day.
The new plans of broadcasting this information by radio are a part of the comprehensive market-reporting system by which the New Jersey Bureau of Markets is bringing the grower and the consumer closer together and the promises better for the housewives in the cities as well as the farmers in the distant rural zones, through making instantly available the information which can be used to advantage in avoiding glutted markets. An overloaded market in one city usually means a lean market in another.

J. B. FAY ESTATE $6100
Will of Late Politician and Officeholder Probated Today
Joseph B. Fay, 2920 West Susquehanna avenue, who died recently in the Northwestern General Hospital, a prominent politician and member of the law department, left an estate of $6100 to members of his family. At the time of his death Mr. Fay was chief clerk of the Small Claims Bureau of the Municipal Court and previously had been a member of the Legislature and was at one time Assistant Director of the Bureau of Health. His will was probated today.

Honor Sunday School Head
A reception was given to John W. Levering, superintendent of the Sunday school of the Second Baptist Church, by his friends and admirers last night. The occasion marked his twenty-eighth year as superintendent of the school and 100 years of unbroken membership in the school by the Levering family. There were musical numbers and a historical recital and speeches by Deacons David Kuen, S. C. Sauer, William C. Young, Walter Lee and Dr. John Gordon. Mr. Levering was presented with a scarfpin.

COLLEGE GIRLS HAVE THEIR OWN PET SUPERSTITIONS
Campus Is Place Where Legends of Luck and Misfortune Are Cherished by Fair Co-eds

College graduations, engagement announcement luncheons and farewell parties, these things are happening this week on the campuses of Philadelphia's nearby colleges.
And in the rush and whirl of packing and the partings there crop forth the many superstitions which even young college girls hold to staunchly.
At an engagement party at Swarthmore College the gay heroine of a June wedding-to-be tripped as she was ascending the stairs and her friends all cried in mournful terror: "Oh, that means you won't be married this year." Apparently, there was nothing to keep the party in the sunlit garden at the girl's home from being a success. But after the incident the hostess and her friends were in dimmed spirits, all apprehensive of some impending sorrow.
A Bryn Mawr graduate, heralded for a brilliant career, dropped a mirror in her hurry packing. Her ardent friends were sure the future was immediately and woefully chilled.
"It means bad luck for seven years, so why plan differently," she said. Superstitions are supposed to be the result of ignorance. But if college girls, the educated and elite, remain victims to them, is that not perhaps the fruit of a long and unbroken line, which goes

HALT PEGGY'S TRIAL, MEN ARE ALL UPSET
Natives of the Famous Gretina Green at Elkton Were Just Getting Interested

FIANCEES BREATHE EASIER
By a Staff Correspondent
Elkton, Md., June 7.—The male element of this most famous of all Gretina Greens is today considerably upset over the adjournment of the court until June 19 just as they were becoming really interested in Peggy O'Dell, former member of Ziegfeld's Follies.

Peggy is contesting the annulment proceedings instituted by John W. Montgomery, member of a wealthy family in Bellefonte, Pa., whom she married here after a gay roof-garden party in Philadelphia January 26.
With her marcelled brunette hair and abbreviated skirt that displayed considerable extent of silk stockings, Peggy was winning her way to the hearts of the men. Wives, mothers and sisters were becoming skeptical. Business of the courthouse seemed to be a pre-arranged meeting place for all those sons of Adam, who could, by one excuse or another, find their way to it. Today the housekeepers and fiancées are breathing easier.
Tears were the principal weapon of Peggy during her recital of the events which culminated in her marriage to the youthful Montgomery and description that Peggy is an emotional actress of unusual talent. She sobbed, it seemed, at regular intervals, and each time the glistening tears flowed, witnesses of sympathy from the male side of the courtroom could be heard. By the time she finished her testimony Peggy was pretty well exhausted.
She denied vehemently that any member of her wedding party had been drinking. She denied that she forced Montgomery to marry her and that she had to lead him from the tent. In fact, she denied everything in the testimony of Montgomery, who preceded Peggy on the stand.
Following her testimony the defense asked that a commission be issued to take further testimony before examiners in Philadelphia and New York. The plaintiff demanded the five days' notice as required by law, and the Court passed the order. Court then adjourned, and the case will be resumed at the regular term June 19.

HORSE ON TRACK, RACES ENGINE; COMMUTERS CUSS
Train Held Up Ten Minutes Between Riverton and Riverside
A trainload of home-bound New Jersey commuters were delayed ten minutes late yesterday when a big black saddle horse insisted upon running along the railroad track from Riverton to Riverside in front of the train.
The engineer tooted his whistle and the passengers grew profane, but the horse calmly took his time while the train dragged behind.
The train was at 4:20 P. M. out of Camden, bound for Trenton, and its engine was crowded. The engine was just getting up speed after the Riverton stop when the horse trotted on the tracks. One look at the locomotive and he dashed away in front, trotting the three miles to Riverside. There the flagman seized his bridle and led him off the tracks and the train got under way.

JOHN WANAMAKER GIVES $1000 TO AID FARM SCHOOL
Unsolicited Contribution Is Sent to Dr. Krauskopf by Merchant
Rabbi Krauskopf has received from John Wanamaker an unsolicited contribution of $1000 together with a letter commending him for his work in the Farm School, in the interest of which the contribution is made.
"You are a pretty good Sunday School man," he wrote, "and I enjoy so much the support given to you, especially by my neighbors, and without any one asking me, I am sending you just as an evidence of my interest and my desire to encourage you, my check for one thousand dollars. If you are not collecting the money on the spot, send it back to me, and I will keep it until you send for it, because I shall consider that you will like me to have a little finger in your work."

PLAN NEW ASH STATION
Wharf Project to Obliviate Hauling Refuse Through Central Section
An ash-receiving station on a Delaware River wharf is to be established by the city to avoid hauling ashes through the central section to the present station on Race street near Twelfth. Director Caven will tomorrow ask Council for an appropriation for the wharf station. The Real Estate Board, through its president, John G. Williams, recently protested against the Race street station.
Director Caven also plans a rubbish-destroyer plant. At last week's session of Council Councilman McKinley offered a bill allowing the city to acquire a plot at Harrowgate lane and G street for the plant.
