REAMLAND ADVENTURES

> Jolly Joker By DADDY

m the Teaser has promised i Cross-Patch not to play tricks on birds or beasts, iris and beasts, however, play tricks on him. Jack promises no Tom a new kind of trick.

CHAPTER V The Jumping Penaut

K mag a queer little song as he get ready to show Tom the Teaser as a on the birds and beasts that ill not break Tom's promise to Giant in Patch. The song ran this way: "Some tricks are bad; Some tricks are sad; Some make you mad, And some make you glad."

John Joker, the elf, looked at Jack wonder. "I know tricks that are at tricks that are sad, and tricks that he you mad," he said. "But who-beard of tricks that make you

Free Janet didn't know the kind of rich Jack had in mind. As for Tom a Teaser he was very curious. He was easer to see tricks with which he call have fun and still keep his word to annoy the birds or beasts. Jack had in one pocket a sack of sauts on which he and Janet infield to lunch's little later. He had a socker pocket a spool of stout linen another pocket a spool of stout linen to use as a fish-line to catch imove. He also had pine with which

And Jar's freshly reasted peanuts smelled specially good. Perky Squirrel whished his nose as he sniffed the air. He followed the smell until he was seen the children.

He followed the smell until he was above the children.

"Come on!" said Jack to Tom, Jasst, and Jolly Joker. He led them away to a distant part of the woods, but quickly circled back to the bushes where had left the end of the thread.

Perky Squirrel saw them go. He saw the peanut shucks on the ground. He have nearer to see if perhaps they had left a nut behind. Yes, sir, there was see they had overlooked. It lay on the grass among the broken shucks.

"Ee-eek!" he chattered. "I have beard the birds tell of seeing jumping beans in Mexico, but I never heard of a jumping nut."

As the peanut lay still, Perky crept down to examine it. He picked it up as an and lifted it to his mouth. Flippety-flop, it jumped away from him. Again Perky Squirrel jumped back, but not so far this time.

"I'll catch that jumping nut yet," he said.

"Till catch that jumping nut yet," le said.

Behind the clump of bushes Tom. Just and Jolly Joker were grinning at Furly's astonished jumps. Jack was lolding the end of the thread.

"This is a trick that is bad," whispered Tom. "It will disappoint Perky beaurel and make him sad. Then I am sure it will make him mad. Where is your trick and will make him glad?"

"Wait and see," whispered Jack, giving the thread another jerk.

(Can you guess how the trick will make Perky glad? Tomorrow's chapter will tell.)

Little Benny's Note Book

By Lee Pape

There was a meeting of the Dawters Cleopatters in our parlor last nite, and every time a lady rang the door bell ma went to the door herself and the lady had to wisper the pass word to ma before ma would leeve her in even if she knew her or not, and pop came down and looked on the hall nek for his hat, saying, Benny, did you notice ware I put my hat wen I came in?

I think you put it in the parler, I sed, and pop sed, Help, aid, sucker, Ive not to go out and Ive got to have that lat, but I wouldent go in that parler after it for a kings ransim.

Do you wunt me to get it for you, pop? I sed, and pop sed, Wat a comfort it is to have childern. Meening he wunted me to, and I tried the parler door and it was still locked, and a lady faside opened it a crack, saying, Wat is it, wat do you wunt, dont you know this is a strickly secret meeting?

is it, wat do you wunt, dont you know this is a strickly secret meeting?

Is a mans hat in there? I sed.

I havent noticed eny, the lady sed. And she locked the door agen and poped, Yee gods. Im late now, its a fine state of affairs wen a man cant get his seen hat in his own house, if things set eny werse Im going to move out of the intire country.

Well Ill go erround to the back whato and see if I can see ma, I sed. and pop sed. Well shake a leg. Witch Idd, going out in the yard and nockies on the back parlor windo and saying. Hay, hay ma, ma. Witch all of a suddin ma quick opened the windo asying, Go away, wat kind of carryings on is this? and I sed, Is there a hat in there, ma? and she sed, How dare you bother me about your hat at sutch a time? And she banged the windo down and I sed, Its pops hat. Ony she dident her me on account of me saying it too he, and jest then I remembered somethis and I went back in the hall agen pop was wawking up and down like edy is a fearse hurry, me saying.
