ALIEN SOBS HIS PROTESTS AT ORDER TO KILL PET DOG

Russian Farmer Runs Afoul State Law and Big, Good-Natured Canine Chum Is Marked for Execution

"Dick," pet of Russian farmer at Orville, Pa., ordered executed under law which prevents non-citizens owning dogs

Jacob Silverman, who lives on a farm at Orville, Pa., near Lansdale, would rather suffer torture himself than have his dog killed.

"Dick," the dog, was sentenced to death by Magistrate Howard Boorse, of Lansdale, under the State regulation which prohibits an unnaturalized citizen having a dog.

Silverman is a Russian who has not been naturalized, and in broken, halting English he expressed his love for the table wagging its tail and looking up into its master's face.

"He is my best friend," said Silverman, "and when I think about losing him it hurts me—it hurts me here."

The huge animal, a cross between a St. Bernard and a mastiff, leaped across the room after a piece of bread which Silverman threw there, his golden brown coat glistening in the sun.

Silverman interjected a quick phrase in Russian and then again took up the struggle with English. "They say my dog must be killed. His eyes were a trifle bloodred as he continued vehemently: 'He no do anything. He never hurt anybody. I say no kill him, but they say, yes, he must die.'

Has Meals at Table

He stopped a minute as he took up a piece of bread and held it out to the dog, who carefully stepped over a kitten not nearly so large as his paw, and grabbing the piece put his head on Silverman's knee. Silverman chuckled with delight.

"See? He all time eat at table with me. He with me all time when I am home."

from City Hall courtyard and thither they were brought in the automobile of Mr. Clothier. They left City Hall plaza at exactly 8 o'clock.

"They expect to be on the road about fifteen days. Tomorrow, somewhere along the road, the sixteenth birthday of Louis will be celebrated. George is one year older."

"I am of age now and do not intend to be dictated to about my marriage," Campanelli left Pittston four months ago and arrived in Camden in search of a job. He succeeded in getting a good place at Delair, N. J., nine miles out of Camden.

"We can live and be happy on what Frank is making," added the girl, "and we are not going to waste any of our money on going back to Pittston to be married, even if my parents have forgiven us and want me to come home and bring Frank. We can spend that railway fare in buying furniture."

"Miss di Angelo got mixed up in her train connections and found herself in New York instead of in Philadelphia Friday. She arrived too late at Camden to make arrangements for a marriage license Saturday, the day she became of age. Also, she did not know of a provision in the New Jersey law which provides for a two days' interval between the granting of a marriage license and the ceremony."

TO SUE BELL CO. FOR DIER FUNDS

Receiver Plans Legal Action to Recover Fees Paid to Phila. Brokers

Suit against Frank F. Bell & Co., stock brokers at 1416 South Penn square, will be begun soon, according to Saul S. Myers, of counsel for the receiver of E. D. Dier & Co., bankrupt brokers.

About $500,000 in scattered assets is sought, Bell & Co. being one of several firms to be sued. Another will be Carpenter, Caffrey & Co., are said to have made $150,000 during the year before the failure through dealings with Dier & Co. and Bell & Co. are said to have made $400,000.

Hearings before the referee in bankruptcy will continue Friday at 2 P. M. In the meantime enough evidence has been obtained, it is believed, to warrant submitting to Judge Mack in the United States District Court a schedule of proposed recoveries of assets.

Included in the schedule of proposed settlements are Mrs. Dier's jewels, as to which an agreement has been reached with the receiver's attorneys. One piece of the collection is said to be a pearl necklace worth $15,000, which was to have been a barometer of increment for the Diers, with a fine pearl to be added to it each year. Part of this collection, it was testified by E. Franklin Gaines, called Dier's most confidential employe, at a private hearing on June 6, the dentist-broker carried around with him for a time after the failure.

Just Wants to Keep Pet

"I want to pay money—to do anything I can—more than a cent—but they tell me no. I be naturalized and buy another dog then. But I want no dog but Dick," and he put his arms around the dog's neck again, "because he my best friend."

There are five more days during which Silverman can keep his dog and he is happy. He lives in dread that after they were brought in the automobile of Mr. Clothier. They left City Hall plaza at exactly 8 o'clock.

"They expect to be on the road about fifteen days. Tomorrow, somewhere along the road, the sixteenth birthday of Louis will be celebrated. George is one year older."
