Mrs. Wilson Gives an Appetizing Menu

low That the Warm Weather Is Here the Meals Should Be Cool and Refreshing

By MRS. M. A. WILSON right, 1922, by Mrs. M. A. Wilson, All

THE housewife likes to plan and arrange her home duties and menu that it will conform with the season, yet give her little trouble. This ually means simplifying both the work and menus; but there arise ocons when it becomes necessary for relative, or perchance a business riend of the men folks of the family.

Each housewife usually wants to housewife to entertain, it may be eviate from a part at least of the usual menu and plan something that will satisfy both the eye and appetite, and BETTY COMPSON, as all renders of photoplay news in this particular paper know, is always a welcome guest on any of the local screens. It is probably not too much to say that there is no actrees on the excess who have is no actress on the screen who has shown such consistent artistic growth in such a wide variety of parts. Anything that the fair Betty does is sure to be done with a most unusual intelligence and with a keen insight into human characteristics that mighty few of the stars of the day possess.
