CAPE MAY NAILS AS CANARD RUMOR PARADE LOST ITSELF

True—Municipal Ashcart Finished Ahead of Band, but Fire Engines Didn't End Up in Red Mill—That Is Not Quite

Few moments in the long and honorable communal history of Cape May have been fraught with such excitement as that which occurred the grand Fourth of July parade yesterday.

It is with sorrow that the citizens of Cape May face indignant whispers that the parade met itself coming back; that the fire engine was lost in the shuffle and was found later in the Red Mill.

Unpleasant aftermath, emanating from the parade of Cape May's streets, is to be expected in the wake of any undertaking on a scale such as this, it is realized.

After some time spent in threading the streets in the central section of the city, the parade departed upon the broad avenue which borders the ocean walk.
