ROCKEFELLER AT 83D MILESTONE

The oil king, wearing a heavy overcoat and a straw hat, posed good-naturedly for newspaper photographers after church yesterday morning. He was eighty-three Saturday.

POSES FOR PICTURES

Oil King, 83, Gracious to Newspaper Photographers at Church

NEW YORK, July 10.—Three newspaper photographers went from New York to the Rockefeller mansion yesterday morning to pose for pictures of John D. Rockefeller who, on the day after his eighty-third birthday anniversary, was due to make his usual Sunday appearance at the New Community Church.

They did not start northward in very hopeful mood, for John D. Rockefeller is notoriously camera shy and almost as difficult to photograph as he is to interview.

The point of the story is that, discouraged as they started, they came back with their cameras crammed with negatives showing John D. Rockefeller, octogenarian, in a country squire, churchgoer, in a variety of poses, assumed especially for them, assumed docilely and graciously.

But they paid, and this was the manner of their paying: Their apparatus unslung and all ready for instant action, the three mobbed at the topmost door when Mr. Rockefeller stepped from his car a little after 10 o'clock in the morning.

Had to Attend Services "Now, Mr. Rockefeller," said they in chorus, wheedling, "just one picture, please?"

The seamed, deeply lined face was more graciously than ever as the subject of their attention smiled and beamed, little crinkly lines puckering out from those blue eyes that can be so hard on occasion and that were so genial just then. A thin hand was waved in a gesture that conveyed at once entreaty, warning and command and the hopeful expressions on three eager faces faded away, only to revive as a gentle voice said:

"Not now, boys. Wait until after church. But do come in and attend the services."

After he had been conducted to his own pew above the chancel rail, Mr. Rockefeller twisted around to make sure that his three recruits were in their places and were sticking. After the photographing started until the end, as quiet as mice in their pew, but they were among the first to act upon the instant for departure. They were outside and unimpaired almost before the photographers had finished their more to learn about the New Community Church and its ways.

Handshaking All Around

After a custom of which the worshippers are rather fond, Dr. Nelson made his way to the door. There the whole congregation, including the handshaking with the rector and greetings with each other. Mr. Rockefeller was in the thick of it, smiling and shaking hands with all who came to his front. As he passed the church he was greeted by a number of his friends who were at the way he without the onslaughts of time.

Not until that exemplification of the community spirit from which the church had chosen its name, was at end and the congregation was whirling away in motors or wandering over the roads in search of Sunday dinners, did Mr. Rockefeller come out.

But when he did appear, he who has refused to pose a thousand times, refused his record and made not the slightest demur.

The aged face was still crinkled with smiles and as fast as the trio who had done his bidding and attended divine worship, Mr. Rockefeller turned this way and that, lifted and lowered his head and allowed himself to be snapped and snapped. Not until the cameras had been taken to the session end as the much-photographed subject climbed into his motor, looking exceedingly pleased with himself and every one else.

POPE DISCHARGES COOK

Was Charged Same Price for Croquettes as for Original Chicken

Milan, July 10.—Because he was overcharged by his cook Pope Pius XI has dismissed that servant, who had been with him during his tenure of office in Bologna, Milan and at the Vatican. It is customary for the Pope to pay for each meal as it is served just as he would in a restaurant. Recently, at a party for a chicken priced at twenty lire he was charged the same price for croquettes as for the original chicken. As Pope Pius had eaten only half he gave instructions that the remaining half should be served as croquettes for the following meal. When the croquettes appeared on the dinner bill at the same price of twenty lire the papal sense of decency was shocked and the faithful cook was sent for and dismissed.

Rail Shops Reopen, Forcing a Crisis

Rail Shops Reopen, Forcing a Crisis

Continued from Page One The railroad shopmen's strike went into effect at the Pullman Company's shops at East Buffalo today. The plant was closed when the strike was called, and it had been announced that work would be resumed this morning. Few of the 2000 men normally employed reported for duty.

Commuters using the Erie were delayed briefly in reaching their offices because of the curtailment of suburban train service. Erie officials said that although only two trains had been run from the morning and evening services, passengers for these trains would have to wait but a few minutes for other trains. The same arrangements for their action had been caused by a car shortage saying shortage of coal was responsible for the curtailment.

David Williams, secretary of the strike, Metropolitan Committee, hailed the Erie service curtailment as "the first sign of victory" for the shopmen. "Other roads will follow," he declared.

Seditious Circulars Found

Circulars addressed "To the Shophmen Maintenance of Way Men, Clerks and Others Affected by the Wage Reductions" were found in the possession of the armed forces of the United States, were reported to have been found on the doorsteps of many railroad workers in New York. Union leaders said the circular would at once be turned over to the Federal authorities.

The circulars were said to have been signed J. Davis, executive secretary, "Central Committee of the Communist Party of America." E. H. Fitzgerald, president of the Railway Clerks had a conference arrested today, when the Labor Board heard over issues upon which hinged a potential strike of clerks.

At Wilkes-Barre, William D. Hobbes, vice president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, announced a meeting Wednesday of twenty-two district chairmen representing twenty-eight railroads in the question of wage cuts by the Labor Board.

Mobilization of special deputies under Federal marshals was made for the additional purpose of protecting mails and property of railroads in the hands of receivers appointed by United States courts.

J. A. Baggett, marshal for the Northern District of Texas, is touring the Texas and Pacific, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas and the International and Great Northern Railroads.

Slater M. Galt, executive secretary of the American Railway Union, is in charge of the situation, but imported strike-breakers experienced difficulty in obtaining supplies from the various parts of the country who will be present.

Among them are Dr. William K. Boyd, professor of American history, Eastern College, A. W. Castle, in charge of the Americanization Bureau of the State Department of Public Instruction; Dr. Z. T. Dickinson, professor of economics at the University of Minnesota; Dr. Herbert H. Foster, associate professor of education at Michigan State Normal School; Professor Frederick P. 2000 AT PENN SUMMER SCHOOL

2000 AT PENN SUMMER SCHOOL

Enrollment Largest in History of Institution, Says Director NEW HIGH SCHOOL COURSE

With nearly 2000 students already enrolled and an endless line still filing past the registration desks, summer school classes at the University of Pennsylvania opened this morning at 9 o'clock.

Dr. H. Lamar Crosby, director of the school and professor in the Greek department, was besieged throughout the morning by those seeking advice. He stated that enrollment figures would be well above the 2000 mark, and that the rush for summer education was the greatest he had seen.

Those seeking additional knowledge in the summer months may be divided into two large groups: teachers who are too busy throughout the winter training courses to find the time to retrain themselves in the fall, and college and school students, who, by securing added credits at the summer school, can shorten the period before their graduation.

A new feature in the summer school, the junior high school course, under direction of Dr. Edward E. Wildman, has brought out many high school girls, who may take first and second year subjects, obtaining credits therefor.

The demonstration high school, as it is called, is not only for the benefit of the students, but also for teachers who may wish to attend the classes for themselves to any extent. There are such classes, eight in the grammar school grades and two in high school. Over 100 students had enrolled at an early hour, and the number of subjects to be taught by members of the State Board of Education.

One other group includes those who are there merely to study for their own satisfaction a subject in which their interest has been aroused.

The school will continue until August 19. Last year's enrollment of 1758 is already far eclipsed. In addition to the regular faculty, there are many well-known professors from colleges in various parts of the country who will be present.

Among them are Dr. William K. Boyd, professor of American history, Eastern College, A. W. Castle, in charge of the Americanization Bureau of the State Department of Public Instruction; Dr. Z. T. Dickinson, professor of economics at the University of Minnesota; Dr. Herbert H. Foster, associate professor of education at Michigan State Normal School; Professor Frederick P. Woolner, of Columbia University; and Dr. A. P. F. Berg, director of mathematics in the State Department of Education.

Cash This Year, Is Berlin Offer

Cash This Year, Is Berlin Offer

Continued from Page One reason for the present financial situation in Germany is the failure of Germany to put an end to the wholesale printing of paper marks and the widespread exportation of capital from the country.

In reparations circles, however, the opinion seems daily to be gaining ground that the fundamental reason for the German financial chaos lies in the total of reparations required, 132,000,000,000 gold marks, which is regarded in many quarters as impossibly high.

It is further being made clear that no adjustment of the total indemnity to what would be regarded as a reasonable figure can be made with the consent of France until there is a definite settlement of the whole question of the inter-allied debt which would either result in cancellation or very indefinite postponement of payments.

U. S. Debt Dragged In It is explained in French quarters that France cannot possibly pay her debt to the United States under the present conditions. The opinion was expressed that sooner or later this idea must be laid before the American Government.

Holmes W. Boyden, the American representative with the Reparations Commission, will return to the United States next Saturday, unless he is instructed to remain during the present crisis, and to explain the whole situation to Secretary of State Hughes before returning to Paris.

Berlin, July 10.—(By A. P.)—The Central Committee of the German People's Party (the party with Hugo Stinnes, the capitalist, is so prominently identified), passed at a meeting Sunday a resolution embodying the clearest pronouncement yet made in favor of the Republic by the People's Party. The resolution read:

"We are convinced that the reconstruction of Germany is only possible on the basis of a Republican constitution. We, therefore, agree with legislation for the protection of the constitution in such a manner as not to encroach upon the maintenance of authority."

Weeps on Stand as She Tries to Break Will of Wealthy Publisher GIRL OPPONENT SMILES

Mrs. Margaret McClure, seeking to break the will of her husband, Thompson McClure, seventy-eight-year-old publisher of this city, took the witness stand in Camden Common Pleas Court today.

Mrs. McClure received one-third of the real estate through her husband's will. She asserts Mr. McClure was insane when he made his will, and also avers that relatives induced him virtually to disinherit her. Mr. McClure died May 6 in the Pennsylvania Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases.

During her examination, Mrs. McClure wept and appeared on the verge of collapse. Miss May McCarter, Mr. McClure's stenographer for nineteen years and named in the will as the publisher's executrix, as well as one of the beneficiaries, was in court during Mrs. McClure's testimony. She smiled several times while Mrs. McClure sobbed.

Mrs. McClure testified her husband disappeared from his home at Woodlyne, N. J., April 12, after he had been discharged from the West Jersey Homeopathic Hospital.

Blames Brother-in-Law "Last November, when my husband became ill," Mrs. McClure testified, "he received a letter from my brother, David, in Wilmington. When the brother came to our home at Woodlyne, he seemed to dominate Mr. McClure. I stated at that time that I had resolved he should have a chance to get even with me."

"On March 15, my husband went to Atlantic City and took David McClure along, after I believe the latter resolved he had a chance to get even with me."

Mrs. McClure told of privations following her husband's disappearance and her inability to get in touch with him. She could get no satisfaction, she said, from his stenographer, Miss McCarter. Even Mrs. McClure's physician, she said, refused to tell her husband's whereabouts.

"On March 25 I received a telephone call from a hotel at Eighteenth and Arch streets," continued Mrs. McClure, "telling me that my husband had returned to me to come to him immediately. I went to the hotel and he turned to me as I was assisting him into a taxicab and said: 'Margaret, I can't tell you where I have been. I want to go home.'"

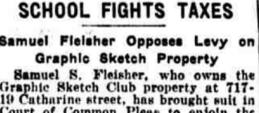

Controlled by Others "Even then they refused to allow my husband to remain with me and sent him to the Pennsylvania Hospital on the excuse that he was mentally ill and went to visit him there every day until he died."

Mrs. McClure was asked if she thought her husband was capable of making a will March 14.

"When I married Mr. McClure," she said, "he was good and honorable until his mental condition changed in the latter part of February. At that time
