

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of Smart Bathing Clothes—She Chats About the Coming Season's Buds—Mary Elizabeth's Disappointment Is Keen

GINGHAM is still very popular for bathing suits, I notice. Recently at Cape May the beach was bright with the gay-checked gingham and heavy linen bathing frocks. To go in the ocean at Cape May reminds me of going to one of the suburban movies. You see some one you know almost every other minute on the beach; and the suburban movie is jammed with your various friends and neighbors.

Cottons are also being widely used this season for bathing suits, and it makes a good-looking costume. Mary Hunter was wearing a suit of gray float tulle on Sunday which had large black dots in it. Mary is Alice Hunter's youngest sister, you know, and quite good-looking. Her sister, Katharine, is wearing a blue and white striped bathing suit. She lives out in Pennsylvania.

Uxbridge Cramer has a bathing suit of red and blue plaid gingham and wears a red bandana on her hair. Somehow I don't think I have ever seen a bathing suit so red in her costume. It's either a red and white or a red and blue plaid. And it's so becoming to her.

Edwina Bruner Wetherill usually keeps to the conventional black bathing suit and she certainly looked stunning in a white linen collar and cuffs. Edwina has such a wonderful figure and carries herself so beautifully it is always a pleasure to see her. She and her husband, Heck Wetherill, have a cottage at Cape May for the summer.

Did you know that Agnes Yarnall is positively coming out this winter? Last week she announced that she would, and then it was decided, since she was still pretty young, that she should have another year at school and make her debut in the winter. The daughter of the Charles Yarnalls and a granddaughter of Mrs. Alexander Brinton Cox, her sister, Margery, married Arthur Reginald, Jr., and Marie is now Mrs. Reginald. Agnes will be introduced at a large dance and it's very likely that Marie will give a ball for her, as she has for her other granddaughters.

LETTIE LANDRETH is coming out next winter, too. Have you ever heard of so many debs as there will be? Over a hundred I hear. This year there have been about thirty. Lettietta, after the war, I saw Lettietta or "Tish" and most people called her, the other day wearing a becoming blue organza dress with a lavender silk girdle and a large white hat. She has wonderful long red hair, which she's just had bobbed by the way, and blue eyes. She has been studying and will occupy this year, but occupational as I said before, she will be a debutante. She is coming out at a tea which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lettietta Landreth, Jr., will give for her on October 20.

MARY ELIZABETH is six years old, and when the circus came to town recently, Daddy decided that he would take her to see it, and that he and she would have a wonderful time together. Said he, "We'll buy peanuts and lemonade and... popovers and doughnuts." "Oh goodie! I always wanted to have a hot dog. Oh! Oh! Daddy, will you really get me one?" "Sure," said Daddy. As the great day came and Daddy and Mary Elizabeth went and they had a wonderful time, though Daddy noticed after the show was over that they had stopped for a hot dog and they had a quiet. He concluded that she was tired and said nothing about it. When Mary reached home, Mother greeted Mary Elizabeth at the door, while Daddy put her away. "Well, darling," said she, "Did you and Daddy have a wonderful time, and did you have peanuts and hot dogs?" "Mother! don't tell Daddy," cried Mary Elizabeth bursting into tears. "I was so disappointed. Daddy only bought me one!"
