

Mrs. Wilson Gives Lessons in Pickling

What Could Be More Appealing Than Pepper Relish, Pimento Catsup or Summer Chutney?

Pepper Relish
Place in saucepan
One cup of finely chopped sweet green peppers
One cup of finely chopped onions
Cover with boiling water and cook for ten minutes, drain and add
One tablespoon of salt
Three-quarters cup of brown sugar
One teaspoon of celery seed
One teaspoon of white vinegar
One cup of malt vinegar

Cook slowly for thirty minutes, then boil rapidly for ten minutes. Pour into sterilized half-pint jars, sealing securely with white wax.

Pimento Catsup
Place in saucepan
Two cups of finely chopped pimento
One and one-half teaspoons of salt
One-half cup of granulated sugar
One cup of vinegar

Bring to boil and cook slowly for twenty minutes. Then rub through a fine sieve, and return to kettle. Cook until quite thick. Store in sterilized half-pint jars, sealing securely with white wax.

Pickled Summer Apples
Select sound, small apples and stick a whole clove and allspice in each apple. Place in saucepan with
Two and one-half cups of brown sugar
One cup of vinegar

Bring to boil and add
One-half stick of cinnamon broken in small bits
One-half cup of preserved ginger cut in bits, and the apples.

Cover closely and cook slowly until the mixture is quite thick. Store as for other summer relishes.

Cabbage Relish
Shred one small head of cabbage as for slaw, place in bowl and add
Two cups of chopped onion
One-half cup of chopped red peppers
One cup of chopped green peppers

Sprinkle with one-quarter cup of salt and stand aside for two hours, then drain and place in the preserving kettle.

Three tablespoons of mustard seed, two teaspoons of celery seed, six whole cloves
One-half stick of cinnamon broken in pieces
One bay leaf broken in pieces
Two cups of vinegar

Three-quarters cup of brown sugar
Cook until thick and then fill into sterilized all-glass half-pint jars. Seal in the usual manner.

Summer Chutney
Place in preserving kettle
One cup of finely chopped green pepper
One cup of finely chopped red pepper
One cup of finely chopped onions

Parboil the peppers and onions for five minutes after chopping fine, before placing in the preserving kettle. Now add
Two cups of grated cucumber that has been rubbed through a fine sieve to remove the seeds
One cup of seeded raisins
Twelve summer apples pared thin and sliced
Two cups of brown sugar
One and one-half cups of vinegar
One teaspoon of cinnamon
One teaspoon of nutmeg
Three-quarters teaspoon of allspice
One-half cup of preserved ginger
One-half cup of ginger

Cook slowly until very thick, then pour in all-glass half-pint jars, seal with wax. Store in cool place. It is very necessary to pay attention to the fact that all-glass jars should be used for these pickles.

If you desire to keep these pickles longer than a few weeks, you must process them further. When you have sealed them sealing hot, place at once in the preserving kettle, and fill to the neck of the jars with scalding water. Boil twenty minutes, then remove, cool, and dip the tops in melted paraffin.

Store in a place that is dry and cool.

How "Innocent Eyes" Write
What sort of a hand would you expect one of those innocent-eyed girls to write?

Well, it would all depend very largely on the eyes, or rather upon what they indicated. For there is more than one kind of "innocent" eye. There is, for instance, the eye that truly betokens an innocent type of mind. And there is one which is affected for a purpose, and which indicates the very opposite.

At one time the word "innocent" meant "unmolested" or "unblemished." In certain periods of antiquity in the past it was used to mean downright lack of brains. The meaning we give it today is a sort of mixture of "guiltless" and "unmolested."

The true "innocent eye" therefore, while it does not indicate lack of mental ability necessarily, does indicate a simple-mindedness which comes from lack of experience with evil. The innocent eye is the unsuspecting eye, the eye in the wonder of the world about it, and not in itself. It is a childlike eye; for many people retain a childlike simplicity of mind long after they become adults. Some never lose it.

Simplicity and lack of self-consciousness under normal conditions is therefore the principal thing indicated by this type of eye, and the person who possesses it, you will find, generally will reveal the same traits in her writing. Letters will be rather free-flowing with little or no concerted, furtive and probably fine struts, but not very small. The letters "a," "o," "q," and "u" will not be well closed either.

Monday—How the "Flopper" Writes
Fairview Civic Association Forms
The Civic Improvement Association of the Fairview section of Camden has organized, with these temporary officers: F. J. Tonzell, president; William J. Dunn, secretary; and S. H. Weiss, treasurer. The following Committee on Constitution and By-laws was appointed: S. H. Weiss, M. E. Conley, A. J. Moran, F. J. Bosch and C. R. Allen. The committee will report at a meeting of the association on next Thursday evening, when a permanent organization will be effected and officers and committees chosen for the ensuing term.

A Practical Frock for Warm Days in Town

By CORINNE LOWE

Today we are showing a charming model in voile which dispings a white figure on a navy background and which is made up with plain white voile. The twisted girdle of the latter is a touch to be noted immediately after the sleeves receive their share of attention. These are slashed at the elbow, banded with the white voile, and are allowed to fall in rectangular pieces on either side of the arm. A model such as this is an excellent suggestion for wear to shop or office on a hot summer day.

Through a Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

Children and Interests
"My only interest," I heard a woman say the other day, "is my children."

"My work is supplying their needs, and my greatest recreation is in watching them grow. There is nothing on any stage half so intriguing as the unfolding of their characters and the developing of their lives. There is no 'outside interest' that could compensate me for missing an hour with them."

"Why go far to study when right before me are the wisdom and the mystery of the ages? It is true that a little child shall lead them." For any good mother can learn much from her children.

All is true that this woman says about the beauty and fascination in watching a child grow, and the satisfaction for the mother heart in constant association. But in what she says is written one of the tragedies of the ages.

Aside from the question of what every woman owes her husband, which by the way is an important factor in the matter, the one fact that makes a tragedy of complete immersion in her children is that this does not and cannot work both ways. The best children in the world cannot give back to such a mother what she puts into them, and what would be necessary later to bring her happiness.

The most devoted sons and daughters must go out into the world and live their lives and have interests in which their mother cannot share. It is natural that they should marry and have children of their own. And even if mother remains the dearest one in the world to them, they cannot give her enough of themselves to fill her life after the duties of caring for them no longer occupy her.

No matter how dearly John loves his mother, he cannot be expected to prefer staying at home with her constantly to a ball game perhaps, or even an occasional girl. The fact that she enjoyed giving up everything to stay at home with him when he was little does not alter the situation.

The one way in which a woman can assure herself of the companionship of her children in the years when their physical need of her has passed, is by staying young with them, by being interested in the things that interest them.

A mother who knows about the things that occupy her wide-awake daughter and who can talk stocks or enjoy a game with her son is a jolly good pal whose children will not have to be impelled by duty to spend their time with her; but to be this a woman must have been interested during the years in which her children were growing up. A mind that has liberated between continuing with an intellectual life, and a viewpoint narrow and arid cannot change in a day.

It behooves every woman while giving herself wholeheartedly to her children, yet to remain alive to a world which, if she turns her back upon it, is sure to pass her by.

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 214—Twenty Match Sticks
Lay twenty match sticks on a piece of paper and write numbers from one to twenty at the bottom of each match (Figure 1). The trick is to remove the matches in five groups, not more than four at one time. The last match of each group must be an odd-numbered one.

The trick is impossible if the spectators try to follow the natural order and take away the matches beginning at the left. The secret is to remove four matches in each group, but take them from the right of the line. Thus the last numbers picked up will be 17, 13, 9, 5 and 1 (Figure 2).

A Word to Wise Homekeepers
No need to say where these rugs can be used, for their character allows of their use almost everywhere, even in quite dignified rooms.
Said one man (yes, it was a man!) who came for a set of rag rugs, "We're taking up all our heavy rugs and putting down light ones. We're going to look as cool as we can, because it actually helps us to feel cool. Besides, it means less cleaning."
But even though you do not intend to use them until Fall, the savings make it worth while to purchase now.
