

RAIL SETTLEMENT SEEN BY LEADERS

Labor Board Indicates New Hearing on Wage Question. Few Other Issues Remain

C. & O. CLERKS TO STRIKE

Chicago, July 19.—Railway strike peace parleys assumed new and more important proportions today, with possibility of the walkout of 400,000 maintenance of way men virtually removed by the action of the Railroad Labor Board in indicating that it would grant new hearings on the wage question.

Ginsberg Is Scored by Police on Stand

Continued from Page One

Mr. Scott cross-examined the witness briefly, asking him if he had not set the younger man up in business. Mr. Nicholson said this was true and named the firm. Mr. Taulane suggested that he telephone the firm and see if they could tell where the younger Nicholson had gone. Judge Quigley suggested that he use the telephone in the judge's chambers.

Edward H. Bonnell, vice president of the Land Title and Trust Company, was the next witness. He said that he was the manager of the Law Enforcement League in reply to Mr. Taulane's questions.

No Direct Knowledge of Charge Mr. Taulane asked if he knew where young Mr. Nicholson was, and he replied that he did not.

"Have you any knowledge of the statement attributed to Mr. Nicholson," asked Mr. Taulane, "the statement demanding that the Mayor make an inquiry into this parole?"

"I know nothing," he read, "I answered the witness, 'I have no direct knowledge.'"

"Who is president of the league?" asked Mr. Taulane.

"Mr. Joseph M. Steele," answered the witness.

"Who is the moving spirit in the league?" asked Mr. Taulane.

"Mr. Nicholson," answered the witness.

Mr. Taulane then called for Lieutenant Lee, who had not yet arrived. While court attaches were looking for him, Mr. Nicholson, Sr., returned and said he had communicated with his son by telephone and all they knew was that he had gone on a boat trip to the Great Lakes and would be gone ten days or two weeks.

Lieutenant Lee Testifies Lieutenant Lee, who had arrived meanwhile, testified he had been in charge of that squad for eighteen or nineteen years.

"Do you know Izzie Ginsberg?" asked Mr. Taulane.

"Yes, I have known him for ten or twelve years."

"What is his occupation?"

"He hasn't any to the best of my knowledge."

"What neighborhood does he frequent?"

"He hangs around Eighth and Walnut streets, associating with people who are alleged gamblers, drug peddlers and addicts."

"How long have you known him to be associated with the drug traffic?"

"For about eight years. He was arrested in October, 1913, in company with Frank Rowan, drug dealer and addict. Ginsberg was charged with disorderly conduct and discharged by Magistrate Watson."

Arrested on Woman's Charge "Wasn't he arrested in reference to a woman before that?"

"Yes, he was. The woman with whom Ginsberg was associated was known in police circles as Helen L. Higgins, Helen Hill, alias Chloroform Helen, alias Pretty Helen. This woman complained to me that she had been taken to a neighborhood joint at 1035 Rodman street by a man named Patterson, who was a dealer in drugs. She was taken there by Ginsberg, where she was induced to smoke opium. She said that when she came to, Ginsberg was gone and so were her diamonds."

"Did you ever see him on the street after that?" asked Mr. Taulane.

"Yes, on Eighth street between Walnut and Walnut street."

"What was his reputation?"

"He had the reputation of being a drug peddler. He was given a year and one day in Atlanta on that charge. To my knowledge, he never did anything else but sell drugs. He was living at a hotel in Walnut street near Tenth, and we received information he was disposing of drugs. We frisked his room, but we found nothing because Lillian Ginsberg or himself threw the stuff out the window."

Asked About 'Izzie's' Brother "Do you know any one named George Ginsberg?" Mr. Taulane asked Lieutenant Lee.

"Yes, a brother of 'Izzie' Ginsberg," Lieutenant Lee produced a Rogues' Gallery picture from his pocket.

"That's all right," said Mr. Taulane. "I know his picture is in the Rogues' Gallery."

This brought a laugh. Mr. Taulane then asked the witness if he knew anything about George Ginsberg.

"I know him as a nicknack," answered the lieutenant. "I never knew him to work. He has a police record. His occupation, in the Rogues' Gallery record, is given as a 'salesman.'"

"Does that mean a drug salesman?" asked Mr. Taulane, getting another laugh.

"I protest against Mr. Taulane putting words in my witness' mouth," declared Mr. Scott, jumping up excitedly. "I don't know anything about him selling drugs," answered the witness.

Police Records of the Ginsbergs William R. Lindner, who has charge of the police records, was then called on to produce "Izzie's" record. He read from a slip that "Izzie" had been arrested in September, 1913, for larceny and discharged; in September, 1914, for ticket scalping and discharged; in April of 1915 for burglary, and discharged; in November, 1918, for selling drugs and found guilty, getting a year and a day in Atlanta; in November, 1919, for selling drugs, and entered a plea of guilty, whereupon Judge Gordon suspended sentence, and, finally, in November, 1920, when he was sentenced to three years by Judge Quigley for using and selling drugs.

The record of his brother George was then read. He was arrested for larceny in October, 1907, and sent to the Huntington Reformatory; in December, 1909, for larceny, and discharged; in September, 1911, for picking pockets, and discharged; again in September, 1911, as a disorderly person, and sentenced to three months; in February, 1912, for larceny, and discharged, and again in February, 1921, as a frequent user of a gambling house, and sent to jail for three months.

Acting Lieutenant Thomas A. Walsh of the Tenth and Buttonwood streets station, known as the "hardest police district in town," was the next witness. He testified he had lived for forty-five years in the tenderloin and had known "Izzie" for six or seven years.

Consort of Thieves, He Says "With what sort of persons did he consort?" asked Mr. Taulane.

"With pickpockets, thieves and others too low to mention," answered the lieutenant.

"He always hung around Eighth and Walnut streets," the witness said in answer to another question.

"But Eighth and Walnut streets isn't in your district, objected Mr. Scott, but it is in the city of Philadelphia," replied the lieutenant with a twinkle. The audience tittered and Mr. Scott subsided.

"Walking Delegate for Crooks" "As a matter of fact," asked Mr. Taulane, "did you ever know 'Izzie' to be a walking delegate for crooks?"

"Any one who was seen with 'Izzie' Ginsberg couldn't be respectable," declared the lieutenant.

Lieutenant Walsh said he had known George Ginsberg for about the same length of time as he had known "Izzie." Mr. Taulane asked if the witness knew whether George was living with a woman, and the lieutenant answered:

HE BELIEVED THE WIFE OF A MAN WALSH NAMED WAS LIVING WITH HIM

"Her husband is the walking delegate for the crooks," said the lieutenant.

"The drug sellers hang out at a drug store on Eighth street above Vine," he testified. "They drive up there in their big cars and get messages over the public telephone, then drive off again."

The lieutenant was asked if the drug dealer ever had arrested or accused of selling forbidden drugs. Walsh answered he had no reason to say that the drug dealer dealt with the peddlers.

Joseph M. Steele Testifies Joseph M. Steele, president of the Law Enforcement League, arrived in court while one of the vice squad men was testifying. He was ordered to the witness stand immediately. After identifying himself he said he did not know that Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment credited to him in the newspapers, and knew of no meeting in which the matter was discussed or the statement of Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment about it until he read it, and had not talked to Mr. Nicholson about it because the latter had gone on a vacation.

"Was Mr. Nicholson authorized to make such a statement?" he was asked. "He was not authorized to make such statements, but he was the active man and any statement that would come from him, I do not know why he made this statement."

Judge Quigley asked: "Was Mr. Nicholson speaking for the league or speaking personally?"

"I would say that he was speaking personally. I have no knowledge that the league had authorized such a statement."

Mr. Taulane then asked Mr. Steele if he, as president of the league, would ratify what Mr. Nicholson was quoted as having said.

The witness said he was not in a position to answer that question because he had not talked the matter over with Mr. Nicholson.

"What are the functions of your league?" asked Mr. Taulane.

Outlines Purpose of League "The purpose of our league is to have the laws created by the eighteenth amendment enforced, and to create sentiment in law enforcement, particularly in reference to that amendment. You know Mr. Nicholson had numerous conferences with the Mayor and the Director of Public Safety, and I presume he may have talked the matter over with them. As far as the league was concerned, I was not present at any meeting where such a statement was authorized."

Mr. Steele was turned over for cross-examination to Mr. Scott.

"The purpose of your association is to perfect the enforcement of the law, is it not?" asked Mr. Scott.

"Yes, sir, would you afford this man Ginsberg every possible help you could if he was going right and going straight?"

"Sure we would."

"You are leading the right life and upholding the laws, it would not be the purpose of your organization to bound him, would it?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Taulane jumped to his feet, saying: "But if a parole were granted to a person who was detrimental to the public, you wouldn't approve it, would you?"

"No, sir, we would not."

"And you would want facts?"

"Yes, sir, we would want some facts."

Detective Daniel S. Nease, an investigator working in Assistant Superintendent Kenney's office, testified to having arrested Ginsberg coming from an alley on Walnut street near Eighth street. He said he had found a cigar box was found containing a drug. The witness testified that Ginsberg was not only a seller but an addict.

Mr. Taulane had difficulty with the witness' faulty memory. Mr. Scott interrupted to say that he understood that Mr. Taulane had resigned as a District Attorney, and he was the role of an investigator and not a prosecutor, and it was not fair for him to be putting words into the witness' mouth.

"Well, Mr. Taulane is in earnest and means well," said Judge Quigley. "There is no doubt about his being in earnest," retorted Mr. Scott.

Tells of Trapping Ginsberg Herbert L. Thornton, of the morals squad, held the courtroom spellbound when he told his part in the capture of Ginsberg. On examination of Mr. Taulane, Thornton told how he and another detective posing as drug addicts went to a house on Reese street near Fifth, where they were met by a Negro named Johnson and a woman posing as his wife.

"The Johnson couple refused to sell us drugs," Thornton testified, "because they said they did not know us. After pleading with them we were still unable to get the drugs and we decided to frisk or search the place. Ella Johnson, the woman, started toward the window and I grabbed her."

"In the struggle that followed I heard the rattle of glass which sounded like two bottles bumping together. Searching the woman, I found two half-ounce bottles containing drugs tied to her leg. She said that Ginsberg had brought the drug to the house and that he had just left and they expected him to return any moment. It was then about 11:30 in the morning."

"We waited until 2 o'clock the following morning, but Ginsberg did not show up. We arrested Johnson and the woman and by arrangement with Judge McNeil of the Municipal Court I had the woman released in my custody."

"While at this house on Reese street I saw a number of telephone numbers written on the wall. On questioning Mr. Johnson I learned that Ginsberg's telephone number was among them. I had the woman call Ginsberg and ask him to deliver some drugs. He refused but said if the woman would come to Sanson street and bring her $35 in marked bills which Quigley had taken the serial numbers of, The Johnson woman kept her appointment at Sanson street and gave Ginsberg's woman the money. Ginsberg's woman gave Mr. Johnson a blue envelope."

"The two then went into apartments at 107 South Thirteenth street. They

HE BELIEVED THE WIFE OF A MAN WALSH NAMED WAS LIVING WITH HIM

"Her husband is the walking delegate for the crooks," said the lieutenant.

"The drug sellers hang out at a drug store on Eighth street above Vine," he testified. "They drive up there in their big cars and get messages over the public telephone, then drive off again."

The lieutenant was asked if the drug dealer ever had arrested or accused of selling forbidden drugs. Walsh answered he had no reason to say that the drug dealer dealt with the peddlers.

Joseph M. Steele Testifies Joseph M. Steele, president of the Law Enforcement League, arrived in court while one of the vice squad men was testifying. He was ordered to the witness stand immediately. After identifying himself he said he did not know that Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment credited to him in the newspapers, and knew of no meeting in which the matter was discussed or the statement of Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment about it until he read it, and had not talked to Mr. Nicholson about it because the latter had gone on a vacation.

"Was Mr. Nicholson authorized to make such a statement?" he was asked. "He was not authorized to make such statements, but he was the active man and any statement that would come from him, I do not know why he made this statement."

Judge Quigley asked: "Was Mr. Nicholson speaking for the league or speaking personally?"

"I would say that he was speaking personally. I have no knowledge that the league had authorized such a statement."

Mr. Taulane then asked Mr. Steele if he, as president of the league, would ratify what Mr. Nicholson was quoted as having said.

The witness said he was not in a position to answer that question because he had not talked the matter over with Mr. Nicholson.

"What are the functions of your league?" asked Mr. Taulane.

Outlines Purpose of League "The purpose of our league is to have the laws created by the eighteenth amendment enforced, and to create sentiment in law enforcement, particularly in reference to that amendment. You know Mr. Nicholson had numerous conferences with the Mayor and the Director of Public Safety, and I presume he may have talked the matter over with them. As far as the league was concerned, I was not present at any meeting where such a statement was authorized."

Mr. Steele was turned over for cross-examination to Mr. Scott.

"The purpose of your association is to perfect the enforcement of the law, is it not?" asked Mr. Scott.

"Yes, sir, would you afford this man Ginsberg every possible help you could if he was going right and going straight?"

"Sure we would."

"You are leading the right life and upholding the laws, it would not be the purpose of your organization to bound him, would it?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Taulane jumped to his feet, saying: "But if a parole were granted to a person who was detrimental to the public, you wouldn't approve it, would you?"

"No, sir, we would not."

"And you would want facts?"

"Yes, sir, we would want some facts."

Detective Daniel S. Nease, an investigator working in Assistant Superintendent Kenney's office, testified to having arrested Ginsberg coming from an alley on Walnut street near Eighth street. He said he had found a cigar box was found containing a drug. The witness testified that Ginsberg was not only a seller but an addict.

Mr. Taulane had difficulty with the witness' faulty memory. Mr. Scott interrupted to say that he understood that Mr. Taulane had resigned as a District Attorney, and he was the role of an investigator and not a prosecutor, and it was not fair for him to be putting words into the witness' mouth.

"Well, Mr. Taulane is in earnest and means well," said Judge Quigley. "There is no doubt about his being in earnest," retorted Mr. Scott.

Tells of Trapping Ginsberg Herbert L. Thornton, of the morals squad, held the courtroom spellbound when he told his part in the capture of Ginsberg. On examination of Mr. Taulane, Thornton told how he and another detective posing as drug addicts went to a house on Reese street near Fifth, where they were met by a Negro named Johnson and a woman posing as his wife.

"The Johnson couple refused to sell us drugs," Thornton testified, "because they said they did not know us. After pleading with them we were still unable to get the drugs and we decided to frisk or search the place. Ella Johnson, the woman, started toward the window and I grabbed her."

"In the struggle that followed I heard the rattle of glass which sounded like two bottles bumping together. Searching the woman, I found two half-ounce bottles containing drugs tied to her leg. She said that Ginsberg had brought the drug to the house and that he had just left and they expected him to return any moment. It was then about 11:30 in the morning."

"We waited until 2 o'clock the following morning, but Ginsberg did not show up. We arrested Johnson and the woman and by arrangement with Judge McNeil of the Municipal Court I had the woman released in my custody."

"While at this house on Reese street I saw a number of telephone numbers written on the wall. On questioning Mr. Johnson I learned that Ginsberg's telephone number was among them. I had the woman call Ginsberg and ask him to deliver some drugs. He refused but said if the woman would come to Sanson street and bring her $35 in marked bills which Quigley had taken the serial numbers of, The Johnson woman kept her appointment at Sanson street and gave Ginsberg's woman the money. Ginsberg's woman gave Mr. Johnson a blue envelope."

"The two then went into apartments at 107 South Thirteenth street. They

HE BELIEVED THE WIFE OF A MAN WALSH NAMED WAS LIVING WITH HIM

"Her husband is the walking delegate for the crooks," said the lieutenant.

"The drug sellers hang out at a drug store on Eighth street above Vine," he testified. "They drive up there in their big cars and get messages over the public telephone, then drive off again."

The lieutenant was asked if the drug dealer ever had arrested or accused of selling forbidden drugs. Walsh answered he had no reason to say that the drug dealer dealt with the peddlers.

Joseph M. Steele Testifies Joseph M. Steele, president of the Law Enforcement League, arrived in court while one of the vice squad men was testifying. He was ordered to the witness stand immediately. After identifying himself he said he did not know that Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment credited to him in the newspapers, and knew of no meeting in which the matter was discussed or the statement of Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment about it until he read it, and had not talked to Mr. Nicholson about it because the latter had gone on a vacation.

"Was Mr. Nicholson authorized to make such a statement?" he was asked. "He was not authorized to make such statements, but he was the active man and any statement that would come from him, I do not know why he made this statement."

Judge Quigley asked: "Was Mr. Nicholson speaking for the league or speaking personally?"

"I would say that he was speaking personally. I have no knowledge that the league had authorized such a statement."

Mr. Taulane then asked Mr. Steele if he, as president of the league, would ratify what Mr. Nicholson was quoted as having said.

The witness said he was not in a position to answer that question because he had not talked the matter over with Mr. Nicholson.

"What are the functions of your league?" asked Mr. Taulane.

Outlines Purpose of League "The purpose of our league is to have the laws created by the eighteenth amendment enforced, and to create sentiment in law enforcement, particularly in reference to that amendment. You know Mr. Nicholson had numerous conferences with the Mayor and the Director of Public Safety, and I presume he may have talked the matter over with them. As far as the league was concerned, I was not present at any meeting where such a statement was authorized."

Mr. Steele was turned over for cross-examination to Mr. Scott.

"The purpose of your association is to perfect the enforcement of the law, is it not?" asked Mr. Scott.

"Yes, sir, would you afford this man Ginsberg every possible help you could if he was going right and going straight?"

"Sure we would."

"You are leading the right life and upholding the laws, it would not be the purpose of your organization to bound him, would it?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Taulane jumped to his feet, saying: "But if a parole were granted to a person who was detrimental to the public, you wouldn't approve it, would you?"

"No, sir, we would not."

"And you would want facts?"

"Yes, sir, we would want some facts."

Detective Daniel S. Nease, an investigator working in Assistant Superintendent Kenney's office, testified to having arrested Ginsberg coming from an alley on Walnut street near Eighth street. He said he had found a cigar box was found containing a drug. The witness testified that Ginsberg was not only a seller but an addict.

Mr. Taulane had difficulty with the witness' faulty memory. Mr. Scott interrupted to say that he understood that Mr. Taulane had resigned as a District Attorney, and he was the role of an investigator and not a prosecutor, and it was not fair for him to be putting words into the witness' mouth.

"Well, Mr. Taulane is in earnest and means well," said Judge Quigley. "There is no doubt about his being in earnest," retorted Mr. Scott.

Tells of Trapping Ginsberg Herbert L. Thornton, of the morals squad, held the courtroom spellbound when he told his part in the capture of Ginsberg. On examination of Mr. Taulane, Thornton told how he and another detective posing as drug addicts went to a house on Reese street near Fifth, where they were met by a Negro named Johnson and a woman posing as his wife.

"The Johnson couple refused to sell us drugs," Thornton testified, "because they said they did not know us. After pleading with them we were still unable to get the drugs and we decided to frisk or search the place. Ella Johnson, the woman, started toward the window and I grabbed her."

"In the struggle that followed I heard the rattle of glass which sounded like two bottles bumping together. Searching the woman, I found two half-ounce bottles containing drugs tied to her leg. She said that Ginsberg had brought the drug to the house and that he had just left and they expected him to return any moment. It was then about 11:30 in the morning."

"We waited until 2 o'clock the following morning, but Ginsberg did not show up. We arrested Johnson and the woman and by arrangement with Judge McNeil of the Municipal Court I had the woman released in my custody."

"While at this house on Reese street I saw a number of telephone numbers written on the wall. On questioning Mr. Johnson I learned that Ginsberg's telephone number was among them. I had the woman call Ginsberg and ask him to deliver some drugs. He refused but said if the woman would come to Sanson street and bring her $35 in marked bills which Quigley had taken the serial numbers of, The Johnson woman kept her appointment at Sanson street and gave Ginsberg's woman the money. Ginsberg's woman gave Mr. Johnson a blue envelope."

"The two then went into apartments at 107 South Thirteenth street. They

HE BELIEVED THE WIFE OF A MAN WALSH NAMED WAS LIVING WITH HIM

"Her husband is the walking delegate for the crooks," said the lieutenant.

"The drug sellers hang out at a drug store on Eighth street above Vine," he testified. "They drive up there in their big cars and get messages over the public telephone, then drive off again."

The lieutenant was asked if the drug dealer ever had arrested or accused of selling forbidden drugs. Walsh answered he had no reason to say that the drug dealer dealt with the peddlers.

Joseph M. Steele Testifies Joseph M. Steele, president of the Law Enforcement League, arrived in court while one of the vice squad men was testifying. He was ordered to the witness stand immediately. After identifying himself he said he did not know that Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment credited to him in the newspapers, and knew of no meeting in which the matter was discussed or the statement of Mr. Nicholson, Jr., the secretary, was going to give out the amendment about it until he read it, and had not talked to Mr. Nicholson about it because the latter had gone on a vacation.

"Was Mr. Nicholson authorized to make such a statement?" he was asked. "He was not authorized to make such statements, but he was the active man and any statement that would come from him, I do not know why he made this statement."

Judge Quigley asked: "Was Mr. Nicholson speaking for the league or speaking personally?"

"I would say that he was speaking personally. I have no knowledge that the league had authorized such a statement."

Mr. Taulane then asked Mr. Steele if he, as president of the league, would ratify what Mr. Nicholson was quoted as having said.

The witness said he was not in a position to answer that question because he had not talked the matter over with Mr. Nicholson.

"What are the functions of your league?" asked Mr. Taulane.

Outlines Purpose of League "The purpose of our league is to have the laws created by the eighteenth amendment enforced, and to create sentiment in law enforcement, particularly in reference to that amendment. You know Mr. Nicholson had numerous conferences with the Mayor and the Director of Public Safety, and I presume he may have talked the matter over with them. As far as the league was concerned, I was not present at any meeting where such a statement was authorized."

Mr. Steele was turned over for cross-examination to Mr. Scott.

"The purpose of your association is to perfect the enforcement of the law, is it not?" asked Mr. Scott.

"Yes, sir, would you afford this man Ginsberg every possible help you could if he was going right and going straight?"

"Sure we would."

"You are leading the right life and upholding the laws, it would not be the purpose of your organization to bound him, would it?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Taulane jumped to his feet, saying: "But if a parole were granted to a person who was detrimental to the public, you wouldn't approve it, would you?"

"No, sir, we would not."

"And you would want facts?"

"Yes, sir, we would want some facts."

Detective Daniel S. Nease, an investigator working in Assistant Superintendent Kenney's office, testified to having arrested Ginsberg coming from an alley on Walnut street near Eighth street. He said he had found a cigar box was found containing a drug. The witness testified that Ginsberg was not only a seller but an addict.

Mr. Taulane had difficulty with the witness' faulty memory. Mr. Scott interrupted to say that he understood that Mr. Taulane had resigned as a District Attorney, and he was the role of an investigator and not a prosecutor, and it was not fair for him to be putting words into the witness' mouth.

"Well, Mr. Taulane is in earnest and means well," said Judge Quigley. "There is no doubt about his being in earnest," retorted Mr. Scott.

Tells of Trapping Ginsberg Herbert L. Thornton, of the morals squad, held the courtroom spellbound when he told his part in the capture of Ginsberg. On examination of Mr. Taulane, Thornton told how he and another detective posing as drug addicts went to a house on Reese street near Fifth, where they were met by a Negro named Johnson and a woman posing as his wife.

"The Johnson couple refused to sell us drugs," Thornton testified, "because they said they did not know us. After pleading with them we were still unable to get the drugs and we decided to frisk or search the place. Ella Johnson, the woman, started toward the window and I grabbed her."

"In the struggle that followed I heard the rattle of glass which sounded like two bottles bumping together. Searching the woman, I found two half-ounce bottles containing drugs tied to her leg. She said that Ginsberg had brought the drug to the house and that he had just left and they expected him to return any moment. It was then about 11:30 in the morning."

"We waited until 2 o'clock the following morning, but Ginsberg did not show up. We arrested Johnson and the woman and by arrangement with Judge McNeil of the Municipal Court I had the woman released in my custody."

"While at this house on Reese street I saw a number of telephone numbers written on the wall. On questioning Mr. Johnson I learned that Ginsberg's telephone number was among them. I had the woman call Ginsberg and ask him to deliver some drugs. He refused but said if the woman would come to Sanson street and bring her $35 in marked bills which Quigley had taken the serial numbers of, The Johnson woman kept her appointment at Sanson street and gave Ginsberg's woman the money. Ginsberg's woman gave Mr. Johnson a blue envelope."

"The two then went into apartments at 107 South Thirteenth street. They

HE BELIEVED THE WIFE OF A MAN WALSH NAMED WAS LIVING WITH HIM

"Her husband is the walking delegate for the crooks," said the lieutenant.

"The drug sellers hang out at a