

SPROUL WORKS ON AT DESK ALL NIGHT

Pleased With Efficiency of Troops in Answering Strike Summons

SITUATION WELL IN HAND

Although he had worked far into the night on troop movement plans, Governor Sprout went to his office at 1512 Chestnut street this morning. He communicated with the executive office at Harrisburg, and with the office of Adjutant General Beary.

"The Governor said he has Colonel Fred Taylor in possession of his executive aide at Harrisburg.

"Colonel Pusey is a fine soldier, with a record in the World War, and I am glad to have him as my aide in the present crisis," said the Governor.

"The troop movement was extremely prompt and our people need not be alarmed by a little incident like this."

"I don't believe we need worry about that matter. The troops are not on a holiday, anyway. It is too bad that happened to intimidate any one. The move is simply to protect citizens who wish to carry on their regular business.

"Reports thus far do not indicate that there is any need of an increased military force at any point in the State, but conditions may change any minute."

"We have been free of trouble in Pennsylvania thus far, although the mining and railroad strikes are in progress. I hope we will not have any trouble, but the best way to forestall trouble is to prepare for it and make it impossible."

"Should circumstances arise, calling for more men, the entire Pennsylvania force will be called to duty. I hope this will not be necessary, but we do not wish to see in Pennsylvania a repetition of some of the events in other States."

"We will strengthen the lines wherever needed."

"When the Governor was asked what orders had been given the troops now on their way to the strike, he said: 'No orders, excepting those given by the regular officers to preserve peace.'"

"Officers of the State troops, confined to the Governor's mansion, are in a position to take any action which is necessary and can take action according to circumstances. As in any business the executives must use their own judgment."

HOOPER PLANNING COAL DISTRIBUTION

Proposed Scheme and Maintenance of Prices to Be Discussed in Washington Monday

COMMISSION TO CONTROL

Washington, July 22.—While prepared to wait for ten days or two weeks, according to present indication, to test the success of efforts to resume production at bituminous mines before adopting any drastic course regarding the coal strike, the Government in the meantime today was pushing its plans for distribution of the dwindling coal supply to insure continued operation of the railroads and essential industries.

With present stocks of coal, there will be no undue risk of an industrial shutdown, officials are convinced, by a fortnight of waiting to develop the response to President Harding's invitation to operators to resume operations, and the Government in the meantime may consider the next steps to be taken should that effort fail.

The proposed plan for coal distribution as well as the formulation of a policy designed to restrain profiteering in the coal trade, will be discussed here next Monday by Secretary Hoover and representatives of the various districts now producing coal.

Secretary Hoover, it was said, expects to depart tonight from Harrisburg for Washington, where he will be met by Attorney General Daugherty covering the legal aspects of the Administration's distribution and price maintenance plan during the strike emergency, and it was indicated that details of the Administration's scheme, which involves the use of local committees in the various coal districts working under a central committee in Washington, might be made public late today.
