

BE ELECTED TODAY

Directors Also Expected to Fix 1926 Definitely as Date for Exposition

MANY NAMES ARE PROPOSED

The directors of the Sesqui-Centennial Association have agreed upon a man deemed suitable for president of that body.

Should he indicate his willingness to assume this title, he will be elected at the meeting of the Board of Directors, which takes place this afternoon in the Bellevue-Stratford.

Efforts by the directors to get in touch with the prospective president were unavailing this morning.

The date for the exposition may be definitely fixed at today's meeting, as it was stated at a session of the Sesqui-Centennial Committee of the Real Estate Board yesterday that assurance had been given that the date of the fair would not be changed.

SISTER IS SLAIN MISS LEITA NELSON IN LOVE TRIANGLE ELOPES TO CANADA

Wife of Dempsey's Ex-Manager But Friends in Montreal Halt Admits Deed, but Police Accuse Son

Named as co-respondent too young, say parents

Cherished dream of William May, twenty years old, and Miss Leita Nelson, sixteen, both of this city, were rudely shattered yesterday when members of their families prevented the young couple's marriage in Montreal.

Both marital adventures are members of prominent Philadelphia families. Miss Nelson is the daughter of Mrs. Henry G. Pearce, of Eleventh and Locust streets, by a former marriage.

Her father, a member of the Philadelphia Hospital for observation as a patient, she was later transferred by the company to Pittsburgh, and after working several years became a stock salesman.

TO IDENTIFY SOLVE IDENTITY OF GIRL

Detectives Want Hypnosis Experiment With Stubborn Mystery Patient

PHYSICIANS ARE UNWILLING

Hypnosis may be resorted to for the purpose of learning the true identity and antecedents of a prepossessing young woman found in the Philadelphia General Hospital.

For a month the young woman has been under observation at the hospital, but it has been impossible to get a full statement from her.

My name is Alice Joyce and I am twenty-eight years old, she told the police when she was found. She has repeated this statement several times at the hospital, but will supply no more detailed information about her past or where her relatives live.

Fights Off Police

Yesterday a police photographer and an expert on finger prints were sent to the hospital to get a picture and Bertillon record of the girl.

Physicians are unwilling to have the girl hypnotized because they believe it would be a violation of the Hippocratic oath.

The girl's name is Alice Joyce and she is twenty-eight years old. She was found in the Philadelphia General Hospital on July 15th.

HUNDREDS PRAY AT ST. ANN RELIC

Feast Day of Saint Draw Crowds of Sick and Maimed to Noted Shrine Here

MANY HOPING FOR CURE

Hundreds of persons went today to St. Ann's Catholic Church at Locust and Memphis streets, to venerate the relic of the saint in the reverent belief that their afflictions of body or mind might be relieved or cured.

It was in 1804 that the Rev. Thomas J. Barry, then the rector of the church, brought from Rome three small bones from the wrist of St. Ann, and placed them in the church.

Since early morning today, when the last of the novena or nine days of prayer, crowds have been gathering at the church to touch the relic, and to receive the benediction of the priest.

Some passed in the door with an exaltation on their faces; others walked with heads bowed, the calmness of resignation and the marks of many years' suffering reflected in their eyes.

Across the street were small children, a bent old woman with a cane, crying babies in carriages over which leaned anxious mothers.

The aisles at St. Ann's were crowded with persons coming and going. Hungry, tired men and women, old and young, were seen in every part of the church, mingled with those who, strong and well, had come to pray for some affliction or relative unable to make the pilgrimage.

Children in dainty garments and others dressed in coarse materials of various colors, were seen on either side of the aisle. Women carrying babies in their arms, and leading them by the hand, were seen in every part of the church.

The line going into the church began to move as the procession halted to allow a little, white-faced crippled boy to climb up the steps. Behind him came a shriveled old woman, led by a young girl.

Solemn high mass was celebrated at 10 o'clock, just before which the Richmond Society of St. Ann marched into the church and took place on either side of the altar.

The Rev. M. A. Hand, rector, and his assistants officiated at all the services.

GROCERS GO TO SHORE

Frankford Association Leaves for Atlantic City Outing

Hundreds of members and friends of the Frankford Grocers' Association, composed of 1028 retail grocers in the northern section of the city north of Girard avenue, left to go on an excursion to Atlantic City today.

A special train in four sections left Frankford Junction between 7 and 7:30 this morning, bearing the excursionists to the seashore.
