ROLLIE NAYLOR WINS FIRST VICTORY OVER SPEAKER'S INDIANS

After Five Years of Trying, Oklahoma Pitcher Breaks the Cleveland Jinx—Mackmen Pound Trio of Hurlers for Easy Victory—Cy Williams Helps Phils Win

THE Athletics' victory over Cleveland yesterday, which lifted them out of the dungeon of baseball once again, has more than the usual significance. Rollie Naylor, the tall, thin, angular son of Oklahoma, who hurled for the victors, turned in his first victory over Tris Speaker and his mates.

For five years Naylor has been trying to score a verdict over Cleveland. In that space he has faced the Forest City team nine times and has failed in his task. The triumph was sweet to him to his wounded feelings, for it not only prevented Cleveland from moving into the first division, but it also enabled the Mackmen to even the series.

Naylor's lifetime pitching average in the majors isn't anything to get hefty over, but it is a remarkable fact that in his fifth year, he is hurling better ball than at any previous time in his major league career.

Opposed to Stanley Coveleski, who had turned in six straight games on the right side of the ledger, the odds were against Naylor. For two innings it looked like a hurling duel and then Coveleski blew up. The Mackmen counted two in the third, four in the fourth and Coveleski sought the showers. Jim Bagby took up the reins in the fourth and lasted until the seventh, when the Athletics added three more runs. In the ninth with Duster Mails on the two two more counters were chased across the scoring platform.

BING MILLER, after a long lay-off, started and finished a game, and his hitting was a big factor in Naylor's win. The fence buster had a double and three singles in four trips to the plate, which means that he has again found his batting eye.

Prospects for Remainder of Season Brighter CHICK GALLOWAY, whose hitting fell off during the latter part of the home stay, in addition to making several startling plays, tied with Miller for batting honors with the same combination of hits, a double and three singles.

With the exception of Perkins, who was dropped to seventh in the batting order because of Miller's return to the lineup, and Henry Scherer, who is getting acclimated to league pitching, every member of the team had one or more hits. McGowan had a triple and single, Dykes a pair of singles, Tillie Walker a double and a pair of one-base blows, Hauser a single, and Naylor a single, in addition to the hits made by Miller and Galloway.

The diminutive Scherer, who has been warming the bench all season, is playing a bang-up game at second base, although his batting has been negligible. Against the Indians he had six puts and six outs, without a hit or more hit. McGowan had a triple and single, Dykes a pair of singles, Tillie Walker a double and a pair of one-base blows, Hauser a single, and Naylor a single, in addition to the hits made by Miller and Galloway.

The former New Haven lad in his few appearances here showed remarkable fielding ability. This throwing is far superior to that of Young's, while his general all-around effectiveness should make him a star next year. His hitting is bound to improve with daily playing.

With Scherer and Hauser playing stellar ball, Mack is at last getting a star infield combination together after many tries. Galloway at shortstop proved the best in the league, with the possible exception of Scott, of the Browns, during the A's home stand. Jimmy Dykes, while not the best hot-corner artist in the majors, is playing a bang-up game and hitting better than at any time in weeks.

Which seems doomed to bench duty as long as McGowan hits and fields as he has been doing since playing regularly. The former International League player is a youngster who should improve from now on and with Walker and Miller hitting as they have been doing the Mackmen may yet get further up in the race. Everything is contingent on their playing in the West.

THE last Western tour proved the Macklets' Waterloo, but the brilliant play against Cleveland after the three straight reverses at the hands of the Indians here gives much promise. If the A's can win against Detroit and Chicago here, they did not do so with the Browns prospects will be bright for sixth or even fifth place.

CY WILLIAMS' home-run bat has been silent for a long, long time. Out in St. Louis he banged out his only home-run of the Western trip. In the first three games on the home lot the Notre Dame graduate hit the ball hard, but was never able to lift it out of the lot. Evidently he was saving the smash for an auspicious occasion. That occasion came in the seventh inning against the Reds yesterday.

The Phils were in the midst of a batting rally that had already netted three runs. Two men were retired at the time and Meadows and Parkinson were on the bases pleading to be brought home. Senior Adolph Lugo, the Cuban, put the first one low and on the inside for a strike. The second came almost waist high and right across the middle of the platter. Williams took a toe-hold, put all his might in his lefty shoulders behind his bludgeon and the last seen of the costly horsehide was white it was sailing high over the right-field wall. Three runs and the game.

After that Lee Meadows tightened up and silenced the Reds' bats. Williams' four-put shot brought the Whitehelmets their third straight verdict of the series and enabled them to keep their three game lead over the Braves.

Previous to the seventh round the locals had made out two hits off Laque, Cliff Lee driving out both. Seven were made off the Cuban in the seventh, the entire side batting around. Keck, who succeeded Laque, kept the hitting and run-getting to zero for the remainder of the fracas.

HOME runs have played a conspicuous part in the three Phil wins and the one Red triumph. In the first game Harper, Dabbert and Wingo hit round-trippers that gave Pat Moran a happy afternoon. In the double-header Lee hit a pair in the first game that made the music sweeter, while Lehoucq tied the score and Fletcher won the second with heroic blows.

Giants and Yankees Make Gotham Glad MARK up another triumph for New York. For the second successive day the Yanks and the Giants turned in victories over the Browns and the Cards. It was the third straight for the men of McGraw and places them two and a half games in the lead for the flag. The Yanks, by virtue of their victory, are now within a half game of the top rung.

The reverses suffered by the Cards was not unexpected. The veteran Giant staff of pitchers have been outwarring the young and old stars of the Cardinals. Hooker tied a new start yesterday but failed to get away with it. He started smart, in a corner of the State star, was pitched to just three batters when he was nipped. Porties, North and Scherdel, who followed in order, were all handled roughly by the Giants, who made eighteen hits.

The Cards made only six off Virgil Barnes and scored seven runs, principally because Milton Stock hit a pair of home runs, driving in six runs. Hornsby made but one hit during the pastime, a single.

Wally Schang was the hero of the Yankee win. The former Athletic backstop smashed one of Wright's daisies into the bleachers in the eleventh round, winning the game. The Browns fought hard, tying the score in the ninth with three runs, but the Yanks had taken the lead in the eighth with a quartet of markers. Joe Bush was the winning hurler and Wayne Wright the loser.

Dave Danforth, who has been accused of maltreating the horsehide before pitching, was called by Whitey Witt and sustained by Umpire Connolly, who pocketed the ball without permitting any one to look at it. He banished Danforth from the game. If the arbiter is sustained it might mean a suspension or banishment from the league for the southpaw.

Zachary hurled a great game in defeating Detroit, while his mates were piling Etnike and Cole hard throughout the contest. Only four hits were made off the Senatorial star.

Amos Strunk's single in the tenth with the bases filled gave the White Sox another win over Boston. Courtney was the winning pitcher and Piercey the loser.

IN THE other National League game the Braves made eighteen hits to fourteen for the Cubs and won a ten-inning battle. Powell's triple and Nixon's single twice down scored the winning run. Christensen, who replaced Christy when the latter was injured, was the star with the stick. He had a home run and a pair of singles.

ANOTHER FOR PITMAN Barney Schaefer expects to put one over on Ben Emery's side. Last week Pitman handed Glassboro a 7-2 defeat, knocking out Larson in the third, while Glen Lech was beaten on Wednesday, 11 to 2. The Girard team, which plays tomorrow, handed Pitman its first defeat of the season in the opening game. Pitman plays the attraction for the Cottagers, and Glassboro at home next Thursday.

College Players Landis' Decision Demand for Horses

THE collegians are coming into their own in the major league baseball club. There are more than a few scattered throughout the sixteen clubs which bow to the rule of Commissioner Landis. In the last visit of the St. Louis Browns George Sleser, himself a collegian, put in a word for the student of books. Sleser contends that it will be only a short time before the scouts will pay more attention to the college athletic fields than to the bushes.

A glance over the line-up of the Detroit Club reveals the fact that the Tigers are gradually becoming an all-collegian aggregation. The veteran George Cutshaw is a former Notre Dame star and Emory Rigney is a graduate of the University of Texas. Art Olsen, for four years, pitched for Cornell. In the last month three new players have joined the Tigers, and all three are former college players.

THE new ruling of the American League, which does away with the ban placed on post-season games for pennant-winning players, is one which shows the magnates to be fair employers. The law which caused the severe penalty dealt Babe Ruth last season was discriminatory and decidedly unfair. It was passed to shackle only those who usurped the name of pennant winners.

DAVE DANFORTH apparently is up to his old tricks. He was put out of the game yesterday by Umpire Connolly for tampering with the ball. Still David contends his delivery is not freckled. HORSES STILL IN STRONG DEMAND FOR SPORT

AS LONG as horse racing, polo, trotting and pacing and the love of a canter through the open country and in the parks continue, the demand for good horseflesh will go undiminished despite the tremendous inroad made by the automobile. For the last several years the demand for well-bred animals has grown enormously, which means that the lovers of racing and the other sports allied with it have increased in numbers.
