room the patients must await their turn, Old Flanneifeet the Cop has not yet been able to boister up his courage to the point of having his aching tooth pulled and a little Doo Dad, with a badly swollen jaw, has made a break for freedom. His mother is after him, however, and will bring him back and kindly old Doc Sawbones will relieve the pain.

Poor old Nicholas Nut is trying to divert his mind by reading the paper, but he is shaking as though he had the ague and old man Grouch had better be more careful where he sits. He will likely arise in a hurry if these automatic false teeth of old Doc Sawbones get a good hold; the little fellow in the corner is having a really terrible time with a pair of them.

And now, just take a look at the workroom. Here is Doctor Sawbones, himself, inspecting the molars of a little Doo Dad that has just come in. Roly is in charge of the gas tank.

For the time being Roly is talking to the old Doo Dad in the door, smoking away as though there was no gas tank. It might explode you know and Roly is telling him all about it while the little Doo Dad, fast asleep, is being kept up in the air for all the world like a toy balloon. Doctor Sawbence is very proud of his dental parlors and his able assistants.

THE DOO DADS—Doc Sawbones' Dental Parlors

In Dooville-as everywhere, little teeth will ache and big teeth decay in old heads and dentists must look after them. In Doctor Sawbones' dental parlors is found the most modern of modern machinery and in his waiting

Old Sleepy Sam, the wise old rascal, is hiding behind the door, but his turn will come soon enough, never fear. Roly is enjoying himself immensely, for he is Doctor Sawbones' "Picker," and picks out the patients. Note how he smiles as he motions to the great burly fellow that is to go in next.
