

ARMY SCHOOL HERE WILL BE ENLARGED

Horsemanship and Topography Will Be Taught at Schuylerkill Arsenal

OFFICER IS TRANSFERRED

Lieutenant Colonel William O. Smith, who has been commandant of the Quartermaster Depot in this city at Twenty-first street and Oregon avenue for nearly four years, will leave the city in September, to go to Fort Benning, near Columbus, Ga., where he will be quartermaster of the United States Infantry School.

Colonel M. Gray Zalinski, who was at the depot here a number of years ago, will assume command of the Philadelphia depot. He has been commandant of the Atlanta depot, which is now being closed by the Government.

Colonel Smith organized the great quartermaster's depot in this city, which is one of the largest in the country. When he first came here the depot was at the old Schuylerkill Arsenal, on Grays Ferry road, which has been turned into a school for quartermaster officers, warrant officers and enlisted men.

School Will Be Enlarged The school will be enlarged greatly when it reopens on September 15. It will be under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Will H. ...

Two new courses, one in horsemanship and the other in topography, will be added to the curriculum for the coming sessions. The number of students also will be doubled and it is expected that about 100 persons, including twenty-five officers, will take the nine months' course.

The equitation course will be practical as well as theoretical. Quartermaster officers should know about animals, said Colonel Smith yesterday. "It is often very necessary for them to purchase horses and mules and provide for their keep. This course will teach the men to ride well, to judge and value the animals and to understand all the details of stable management. When they finish they'll know everything from how to trim their forelocks to shoeing a hind leg."

Men to Learn Map Reading

The addition of the topographic course has been undertaken only after careful consideration. In the past it happened that far too often quartermasters were unable to read maps. It is absolutely essential that they be familiar with the details of the country in which they are operating. Often a map is the only means for obtaining that knowledge, so there will be a special course in map work of all kinds. The old arsenal now is used only for the school. The factories have been moved to the depot and the buildings have been remodeled so as to provide comfortable living quarters for the students. The officers probably will live outside, but the enlisted men and warrant officers must live within the school grounds. The work up to the present has been carried on with lieutenant H. Kirsner as director. He has made a success of the school, and is enlargement will open its advantages to many others in the Q. M. corps.

SEEKS REFUGE IN JAIL

ged Man, Deserted, Just Wants a Place to Live

An unkempt and bedraggled old man entered the Tenth and Buttonwood streets police station yesterday. His nose was working convulsively to restrain sobs.

"Sergeant, I want you to lock me up and send me to the House of Correction. I'm an old man and I've no place to go."

Sergeant Kearney wrote his name on the slate. The man said he was George Lewis, 1049 Buttonwood street. Lewis said he had two sons, but they refused to support him in his old age and shut him out of the house on Buttonwood street.

His request was granted and he was locked in a cell. Under the law a man can commit himself to the House of Correction if he has no other place to live. Lewis' trip to the station house was nothing new for the police say. Every once in a while he becomes embroiled in a family argument and seeks quarter refuge in the House of Correction. He is sixty-three.
