

CATHOLICS PLAN TRANSIENTS' HOME

Archdiocesan Union Backs Hotel to Provide Quarters for Young Men

APPROVED BY CARDINAL

The Catholic Young Men's Archdiocesan Union begins this week a renovation of its building at 157 North Fifteenth street, which will mark the beginning of a new department for which the property was purchased. There will be provided a modern hotel and apartment for young men wishing temporary quarters, and the institution also will be developed into a social center for Catholic young men.

It is expected, eventually, to make this institution a connecting link between all the young men's societies in the archdiocese. The establishment of the center is the outgrowth of twenty years' striving on the part of Catholic societies for such a center. The first step came with the purchase by the Catholic Welfare Council of the Fifteenth street property under the title of the Beneficial Service Club. The new center received a great impetus when Cardinal Dougherty, shortly after he came to this city, inaugurated a campaign for St. Ann and the Beneficial Service Club soon turned over its new property to the new Catholic center.

The alterations and additions are expected to be completed before fall so that there may be a formal opening before winter.

TO DEPORT ANARCHIST

Tito Ligi, Adjudged Dangerous, to Be Sent From Country

Tito Ligi, the confessed anarchist, who was arrested in Scranton about two months ago on complaint of agents of the Department of Justice, and taken to the Gloucester detention house of the Bureau of Immigration on a deportation warrant, will return to Italy Thursday on the steamship American. The department in Washington has approved the report of Commissioner James L. Hughes that he is a dangerous alien.

Ligi was first sought in connection with the Wall Street bomb outrage, but proved he was not in New York when the explosion occurred. He was sent to jail for a year for evading the draft. Last March Ligi was released and returned to Scranton in June, where he was arrested.

Cussedness

—By J. P. McEVROY

IT IS the theory held in some parts of the belief, that church spires brush the skies to symbolize man's yearning for the spiritual and the esthetic.

And, we are told, towering office buildings lean to dizzy heights because of this same deathless urge for the well-known good, the celebrated true and the equally famous beautiful.

PERHAPS, but I don't believe it. Man walks erect, looks up, builds towering structures, climbs dizzy heights and dies giddily into the sun for one reason and one reason only.

A very simple one, too. Pure cussedness. Nothing else. How come?

The one force which has subdued man from the beginning, the one force he could never resist, or define or visualize or escape is gravitation. And because he could do nothing about it he decided he would. Bull-headed, you see, from the very beginning. So he got up from his fours and began walking erect. And as he began to build he built higher and higher to show his contempt for the ground which tried so hard to hold him fast.

AND then came the day when he invented the balloon and could sit on the clouds and thumb his nose at the earth. Was he satisfied? No. For he was still full of cussedness.

No, he invented parachutes, and no sooner did he demonstrate his disdain for earthly contact by soaring aloft than he attached himself to his parachute and hastily leaped back to the earth he had just repudiated. Does it make sense? No, but that very little we do make sense. Why should it, in fact? It is only when we do things because we want to and not because they are or are not sensible that we really live. Drinking, smoking, dancing, love-making, are they sensible? Of course not, but they're fun. The importance of being sensible is vastly overestimated. The things you do don't have to make sense. Usually they don't. And, look how happy you are!

PATIENT FATALLY BURNED

Stood Under Dripping Hot Shower.

Physicians Say
Trenton, July 31. — Robert F. Jamieson, forty-three years old, of Trenton, died yesterday at the New Jersey State Hospital under mysterious circumstances. According to the hospital authorities, he was scalded to death. They say Jamieson went to the shower baths which cannot be turned on without a key. The keys are not accessible to the patients, but physicians say the shower was dripping and Jamieson stood under it until he was fatally burned.

Furniture That Exemplifies the Greatest Values in Years

- Q The opening of this Great Sale marks an event in the Furniture world that we believe is without precedent. We never welcomed so many people and never sold so much or heard such expressions of delight with the Furniture and the savings.
- Q It would be little credit to us if it were otherwise. This Great Store, more than any other in America, should rise to heights of grandeur and values without parallel. We have accomplished these things in this Sale—even better than we hoped, better than our best and oldest customers expected. And we simply say, let the public judge us by our accomplishments.
- Q Furniture as fine as ever met the approving eyes of womankind. Not for the magnificent home only, but for the simplest dwelling and home-like cottage as well. See this display if you would know the manufacturing facilities, the buying power and the economies of this Great House. As we study the needs of the people and the home, we strive with equal ardor to effect savings that bring our prices down to the lowest level in the trade, just as we strive to bring the quality and appearance of our Furniture up to the highest point of human excellence. Judge us then by the values you find—whether you need a single chair or equipment for an entire house.

Illustrated from Our Salesfloors
This handsome Suite, fashioned after the Adam style, with its chaste and classic lines, gives an air of restful distinction to the bedroom.
