

ABSTINENCE UNION SAYS DRY ACT FAILS

Resolutions Call for Suppression of Bootlegger as a Duty of the Hour

MESSAGE TO POPE PIUS

Rejection of the assertion that the law cannot make men more moral, yet at least in part, were contained in resolutions passed this morning at the second day's session of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union at Eighteenth and Wood streets.

Scorns Perseverance of Truism

"This Union had never subscribed to the unchristian assertion that law cannot make men more moral," said the resolution in part. "It scorns the perseverance of the truism that law cannot compel obedience in the absence of free will."

Suppression of Bootleggers Urged

"We believe that sincere horror for such evils suggests unremitting war upon bootleggers and other criminals," the resolution declared. "There is abundant evidence of many evils of alcoholism in many quarters."

100 GIRL TOILERS QUIT BRYN MAWR SADLY AS SUMMER SCHOOL COURSE COMES TO END

Back to Mills and Factories They Start, With Lessons of Worth of Education as Real Knowledge of Rule of "Live and Let Live"

NATURE STUDY CLASS AT BRYN MAWR

The Bryn Mawr summer school is closed and the 100 girls who have been there for two months have learned many things besides lessons in books.

Elizabeth Reintcher, of Reading, expressed it in a few words when she was asked what gain the eight weeks of the school had brought her.

"I've met so many different types of girls since I have been here," she said with an expressive gesture of her hands, "girls from all over the country. They told of their various jobs and experiences, but at first each girl said to herself, 'I'll never do that.'"

Friendly Feeling Engendered

And that is the keynote to the true success of the summer school this year. A more friendly feeling between the employees and employes should certainly be the result in the fall when the girls are anxious to help those who are left behind to carry on the routine of a work-a-day world.

SIX ARRESTS BLOCK RADICAL FIRE PLOT

Men With Gasoline and Paper Trapped at Home of Snel-lenburg Foreman

FIVE PRISONERS — ALIENS

A plot by radicals to set fire to the homes of Snel-lenburg clothing factory workers is believed to have been frustrated with the arrest of six aliens at 2:45 o'clock this morning.

The men were surprised by City Hall detectives and patrolmen as they approached the home of Henry Di Angelo, 2313 South Woodstock street, a Kirsch-baum foreman.

Each man carried a quart jar of gasoline and a quantity of tissue paper saturated with kerosene.

The six men were hauled into a patrol wagon and taken to City Hall where they gave their names as Joseph Focosi, twenty-four years old, 1720 McKennan street; Edward Leonardo, twenty-four, 1934 Millin street; Reg-giero Di Pietropoli, twenty-one, 1346 Moore street; Alessandro Striozzi, nineteen, 5023 Lancaster avenue; and Joseph Di Angelo, twenty-four, 1334 Millin street.

Police Dogs Held Till Bill is Paid

Philadelphia Man Says German Dealer Is Trying to Collect Too Much Cash

Three German police dogs are being held by customs officials at the office of Captain Theodore Lynn, appraiser of stores, 134 South Second street.

They were sent from Breslau, Germany, to John Clark, 149 Richmond street, in return for a draft for $700, and are held in default of the payment of $662 for transportation and care.

Which Clark insists was included in the $700. He says that the German owner agreed that sum would cover the cost of the dogs and their passage to this country.

Clark learned yesterday that the dogs had been seized by customs authorities and were posted for public sale Friday.

He was later permitted to file a bond to cover the sum still to be paid, and the dogs are to be turned over to him.

Clark has secured a foreign attachment against the money which he will pay in order that the German dog fancier will have no opportunity to claim any of the cost of transportation.

The dogs arrived on the steamship Chickasaw. They traveled in three little dog boxes built to resemble bungalows. The houses are barred and on each are printed the German names for "food," "water," "evidently in order to suggest to the crew of the boat that the animals needed sustenance.

Along with the dogs the German sent paraphernalia to be used in training them.

Captain Lynn started to open one of the houses. The dog snipped at him viciously.

CONDITIONAL PERMIT ISSUED FOR OPENING CHESTNUT ST.

Dunlap Says Western Union Must Lay Cables by October 10

The Western Union Telegraph Company today received a conditional permit from Chief Dunlap, of the Highway Bureau, to open the north side of Chestnut street from Tenth to Fifteenth streets. The company will lay cables under the street.

The permit contains this clause: "The Director (of Public Works) reserves the right to annul this permit if the work is not carried on progressively and at such a rate as will guarantee the completion of the work on Chestnut street by October 10, 1922."

The street is to be opened for 500 feet at a time. Protection is to be furnished passengers alighting from street cars. Two ten-hour shifts of workmen are to be employed. The men must work on Sundays and holidays if directed. Cables must be laid at a depth of 4 feet. Work will begin tomorrow.

ROB CATHOLIC CHURCH

Fake Electrician Visits Our Lady of the Rosary and Steals Vestments

A thief posing as an electrician robbed the church of Our Lady of the Rosary, Sixty-third and Callowhill streets, yesterday of church vestments and other articles valued at several hundred dollars.

Shortly after 3 o'clock a man carrying a small bag approached the Rev. P. J. Dailey, pastor of the church, and said that he had been sent to repair the lights. He was permitted to enter the parish house and then he walked into the church. When he left the robbery was discovered.

For the thrifty man who jumps at opportunities these prices need no explanation.
