Why not consult your mother? Usuually it is not well to go without a chaperon.

Writes to "Anxious"

Dear Cynthia—I, too, like "Anxious," have been reading your column for over a year. I have also written you, and received a very satisfactory reply. Many thanks to you, Cynthia.

'Anxious' is just the sort of fellow I should like to meet, one who doesn't fall for every girl he goes out with. Although I do like to be kissed and induige in it, I enjoy going out with a fellow who doesn't make an attempt to kiss me. I never offer to kiss any fellow. If he is decent and of good character, and he makes an attempt to kiss me. I let him kiss me. Some boys go out with girls they have never seen before and have a regular, what they call, "mush party." Don't you think this rather vulgar?

The Wife Cheater By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Joan Stockbridge marries Norman Wayne in spite of many warnings from her friends. She chooses him in preference to Herbert Livingston, a man who loves her devotedly, but who lacks Norman's charm. Norman is the kind of man who has never known what it was to care for one woman more than a few weeks at a time, and after he and Joan are married, he makes her miserable bemarried, he makes her miserable because of his attention to other women. When Edith, Joan's younger sister, comes to visit them, Norman is obviously interested. Edith is twenty and full of airs and graces. Men to her are an amusement and she is not averse to a flirtation with her brother-in-law.
