THEIR ROMANCE WAS BRIEF

Marshall Nellan and Blanche Sweet, whose romance ripened into a marriage which took place in Chicago recently, are now reported to have separated and are living apart. Nellan is directing "The Stranger's Banquet," and Mrs. Nellan is returning to the screen as the leading woman in "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

THE MOVIE FAN'S LETTERBOX

By HENRY M. NEELY

Nell Pinkston—Time and other considerations prevent me from giving you criticism on your scenarios, and I cannot give you information as to what companies to send your manuscripts to. Few are taking any at all, but you can find a list of the companies and their addresses in any of the "fan" magazines.

"Me" writes: "Not having as soft a job as some, I cannot find time to typewrite, so I must take a chance on having this accepted. I hope this shade of paper is right. Until now I was satisfied to read your comment and that of other people, but I must answer the one who 'knocked' 'Smilin' Through.' I think that picture was wonderful. Why? I'll state my reasons and hope to have a comment from you.

"The story was convincing in this respect. I could believe in and sympathize with every mood. What I mean to say is that I could see every actor's part. I could see how Moon's part could be loved, and how she could care for Carter, and how she could prefer him to Jerry Wayne and how Jerry could not give her up. I could see and feel Moon's part, and how she could care for Carter, and how she could prefer him to Jerry Wayne and how Jerry could not give her up. I could see and feel Moon's part, and how she could care for Carter, and how she could prefer him to Jerry Wayne and how Jerry could not give her up.

"Perhaps instead of saying I felt them, for I did. Each part was real. Even the parting of little Kathleen with the two little chaps was poignantly real. But I can understand how someone who would dislike the spirit part, though to me it was real, as I'm a firm believer in after life.

"Never in any picture have I been impressed with a wonderful peace of mind after seeing the picture, and I've seen them all—nearly.

"Have you felt like I did in regard to the picture? "No I figure that when a picture does to a person's feelings what that picture does, why, that point about Moon's dying and not being attended should be forgotten and not be held against it. Let me state that the person who wrote that letter could not have felt like I did nor hardly interested to notice a thing like that. About Harrison Ford not wanting to marry Kathleen, I'm sure he was crippled, then changing his mind with no apparent reason, am I not right in saying that his acting was perfectly logical, since he said he didn't love Kathleen to marry him out of pity when she saw him lame, as he thought she would come to care, but not have the heart to tell him that that was the reason. So when he discovered she loved him anyway, why he capitulated.

never to give advice on this kind of question.

"Kuriosity Kids" write: "Although we have followed your movie column with great interest, this is the first time we have ventured to write to you. Before we go any further we would like to say that we are not 'downing' the movies, but how do they get away with it?

"Last night we went to what is considered one of the best theatres in the city to see a picture called 'The Sheik of Araby.' To our great amazement and surprise, we discovered that we had seen the same picture two years ago at a very small theatre. We are sure it was the same picture, although we saw it under the title 'The Man Who Turned White.' Nothing was changed in the entire picture, and the clothes seemed old-fashioned two years ago. What is the idea giving the public an old picture like that with a new name?

"Please print this and see if other readers have noticed the change.

"But, by the way, 'Hen,' don't you think 'Rudy' makes love divinely? If he could have played in 'The Sheik of Araby'! Oh, 'Hen,' we've fallen too."

(You bet I'll print your letter, because I'm always glad when the fans notice "tricks of the trade" like that. I saw the picture mentioned, and I agree there wasn't a change made except the title. There's no use going into a long harangue on the subject, but that practice is an abominable one. I understand, though, I'm going to disappoint you by saying that I think H. B. Warner a hundred times better actor than Valentino. That picture you mention will be shown here beginning September 2.)

Eleanor—The information on the identity of that Griffith picture has already come across, but I thank you and the fans thank you. Perhaps because I'm feeling in a combative mood, but I must confess I don't like what you call "nice endings." I don't like Lillian Gish, and I don't think so much of Griffith. And I did think "Our Leading Citizen" a bully feature—the kind of original scenario we need on the screen. I hope Ade sticks around the game a while. "Over the Border" and "The Bachelor Daddy" were nothing wonderful, but I'm frank to say I've seen worse.

M. E. B. writes: "I am not very keen about so-called 'educational' movies, as they are at present. But an in-classroom and vivid presentation of the valuable and pleasant way of adding to the general culture of this generation, can't imagine today's happy wedding through the long descriptions of Sir Walter Scott's historical novels—but I can imagine her getting plenty of thrills, as well as a good working knowledge of the period of the Crusades, while watching a version of 'The Tullman,' with Wallace Reid as Sir Kenneth of the Leopard; Valentino as Saladin; perhaps Agnes Ayres as Lady Edith; directed—remembering 'Joan the Woman'—by Cecil DeMille. How about it? You remember how well 'The Woman God Forgot' filled the picture, 'Conquest of Mexico' and though I dislike her screen personality excessively, I incline to think Gloria Swanson could do Becky Sharp —at any rate, please don't wish it on Norma Talmadge, though I am sure she has the ability.

(I certainly am honored at having a correspondent so far away as Boston—the place where they put two features on the same bill and surflet you with them. While we don't agree on the so-called educational, we're strongly in accord on the filming of the old classics. I'm particularly anxious to see "Ivanhoe," which I understand Universal has given up planning to film. I don't think Gloria would be equal to Becky, and still would choose Norma for the role, unpleasant as it is, and as much as I admire the lady.)

FOREST FIRE PUTS FILM COMPANY OUTFIT IN PERIL

By CONSTANCE PALMER
Hollywood, Calif.

THE progress of a big forest fire near Cranbrook, B. C., is being watched with anxiety by the movie colony. Several of their friends are on one or other path. Among them are Reginald Har-er, the director; Irene Rich and other members of the Louis B. Mayer company on location in the forest. Every attempt is being made to get help to them. The primary difficulty is locating the group, for they are miles beyond telephone or telegraph. Among the imperilled are Richard Tucker, Clio Madisson, Anna Wilson, Frank Keenan, Charles Condon—the Mayer publicity man—James Vachella, Duke Cox, Florence Browning—secretary to Mr. Mayer—Styelia Sanborn and Little Richard Hendrick, the child actor.

Mary Pickford has become a partner of Santa Claus. She expects to establish a large factory for the making of dolls in her own image. Sixty different models were sculptured by eight internationally famous artists before a striking likeness was accomplished. It was my good fortune the other day to be the only outsider allowed to watch Christian von Schneidau, the famous Scandinavian artist, put the color on the likeness he had made of Miss Pickford. The star sat patiently as Mr. von Schneidau studied her coloring and applied the paints. Mrs. Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks watched anxiously.

The dolls will be dressed in four ways—as Little Lord Fauntleroy, Pollyanna, Little Rich (if) and one other character not yet decided upon.
