PITCHER DOUGLAS TALKS OF LETTER

Says He Is Innocent of Any Crookedness, and Was Given "Dirty Deal"

PLACES BLAME ON MCGRAW

New York, Aug. 19.—Phil Douglas, who was barred from organized baseball for an offer to foment the Giants and thus injure their chances for winning the National League pennant, declared today that the letter, which brought about his banishment, was written to Leslie Mann, outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Prisoner for Five Days

The banished pitcher declared that his clothes were taken from him and that he was kept a prisoner in the sanitarium from Tuesday, August 1, to the following Saturday.

Left For Pittsburgh

"I was in bad shape on Saturday, August 12, and the club doctor came to my house and gave me a hyperdermic injection. The doctor also came to the house on Sunday and Monday.

Threatened by Detectives

"After the detectives had practically kidnapped me while I was drunk, they threatened me with a blackjack. I passed out while I was in the police station, and when I came to I was in the sanitarium. Then they gave me some knockout drops and refused to let me until the following day.

Threatened by Detectives

"As I said before Mann crossed a me, but God knows I never threw a ball game in my life. I haven't always kept in the best of condition but I've always done my best. The letter put me in an awful fix and makes everything look bad for me, but I'm not concealing anything. I've been put in an awful fix and don't know just what to do at present, but I'll prove my innocence in the end. I want the public to know that I am not guilty of any crooked baseball."
